60 Subs Sunk In 3 Months; New U-Boat Tactics Fail

Shipping Losses Drop in Drive of U. S. and Britain, OWI Announces

By Ben W. Gilbert

In spite of new U-boat weapons and tactics, the Allies destroyed approximately 60 German submarines during the months of August, September and October, the American and British governments announced last night.

The number of United Nations merchant vessels lost during the three months was held to less than the number of submarines destroyed, the Office of War Information said in its monthly antisubmarine communique, issued under the authority of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. Commenting on the report at his press conference, the President said that the figure 60 represented only sure kills—that a large number of other U-boats probably were sunk or damaged.

Shipping Losses Low

President Roosevelt also commented that October was very close to being the lowest month for merchant ship losses for the United Nations, with a few less ships lost in August.

It's getting along pretty well, the President said.

An OWI spokesman explained that the report only covered the war against German submarines, and not the war against Japanese under-sea craft in the Pacific.

The number of U-boats sunk during the three months' period represented a decline of 30 from the previous three months when 90 were destroyed, but the statement explained that fewer U-boats were operating during the last three months, thus presenting fewer targets.

The ratio of U-boat to merchant ship attrition during October "was more satisfactory than any previous month," the statement said.

Although actual shipping increased, the U-boats destroyed only half as much tonnage during the past three months as during the previous three months.

Red Army Fanning Out From Kiev

London (Wednesday), Nov. 10 (AP). Red army shock troops captured more than 80 northern Ukraine towns and villages yesterday and battled to within 58 miles of the key rail city of Korosten to increase their threat to trap or force back into Rumania the depleted German divisions still hanging on in the great bend of the Dnieper River, Moscow announced early today.

In an advance of 27 miles northwestward from the liberated Ukraine capital along the main rail line to Korosten, Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's conquerors of Kiev wiped out a battalion of German infantry to capture the district center and railway station of Borodyanka.

The midnight Russian communique, broadcast by Moscow and recorded here by the Soviet monitor, also said Russian troops, fighting to extend their bridgehead on the Kerch Peninsula in the Crimea, beat off desperate attacks by German units northeast and south of

Halsey Cables Plea for Gifts To War Fund

$4,800,000 District Quota Is Now 85.45% Subscribed

An appeal to contribute to the Community War Fund was made yesterday by Admiral William F. Halsey, U S. Naval Commander in the South Pacific. He reminded Washingtonians that their dollars were providing the means for successful drives in the South Pacific and that those drives would increase in scope and effort until the "enemy cowers in terror in his homeland."

"Our men are proving themselves out here," he cabled, "may your will to win be equal at home."

Washington's contribution to the fund stood yesterday at $4,101,429 or 85.45 per cent of the $4,800,000 goal. More than a million dollars of this objective is slated for service organizations which include the USO the War Prisoners Aid and the United Seamen's Service.

Herbert L. Willett, jr., executive director of the drive, asked that Armistice Day be remembered with a gift to the fund, and reminded Washingtonians of the price of failure.

"There is no better way," he said, "for us to honor those heroes who laid down their lives for us a quarter of a century ago, or for those who are laying down their lives for us today for the same cause."

"America's goal in 1918 was peace, but by a narow margin we failed. Today we know the tragic cost of failure in 1918. That failure is spelled by mounds of dead, the ravaged continents and a world in flames. We say we wil never let it happen again.

Here in Washington we have a job to finish if we are to keep on

Nazis Pouring Men Into New Line in Italy

Allies Face Greatest Massing of Troops Since Africa Thrust Began, Is Report

By Edward Kennedy

Algiers, Nov. 9 (AP).—The German command, using Italian slave labor, has erected a new "winter line" across Italy directly in front of the present positions of the Allies, it was disclosed today, and is pouring in reinforcements in its greatest effort to date to stem the drive of the Allied armies northward.

Even as existence of the line was disclosed by German soldiers captured at various points along the front, Allied armies already were pounding against it, the British Eighth smashing forward in a five-mile thrust which caught the Germans off guard and carried to the area of the mouth of the Sangro River at the new line's eastern anchor.

Nearly 50 towns and villages passed into Allied hands as a result of Allied gains along the Adriatic coast and in the central sector of Isernia. To the west, heavy rains and strong formations of enemy troops and guns in the Mignano area along the main road to Rome kept the Fifth Army near a standstill.

Rugged Mountain Line

The western buttress of the new Nazi line is the Aurunce Mountains on the Tyrrhenian Coast some 50 miles northwest of Naples. Its Adriatic bastion is on heights north of the River Sangro. Between these two ends it makes use of some of the most rugged mountains of Italy, with peaks rising to almost 7000 feet.

The Nazi command is determined to try to hold this line through the winter, according to the captured Germans, and to this end they have brought in heavy reinforcements and have tens of thousands of forced Italian laborers bolstering the strong natural barriers with defensive constructions — walls, ditches, pillboxes, forts, minefields and trenches.

The Germans now have a total of at least 11 first class divisions (perhaps 165,000 men) in the front area. Tremendous effort has been put into building up this front and, on the basis of reliable information here, it appears the German armed strength in northern Italy, France and other places has been strained.

Facing Mass of Troops

The line has been under construction for weeks by Italians working at gunpoint, Don Whitehead, Associated Press correspondent with the Fifth Army, disclosed in a dispatch from the front today. The Fifth Army, Whitehead wrote, is now facing the greatest concentration of enemy troops and artillery since the invasion of North Africa.

"Hour by hour," said Whitehead, "evidence is growing that the Americans and British must fight the most savage battle of the entire

Enemy Warships Believed to Have Escorted Barges South From Buka

By William F. Boni

Southwest Pacific, Allied Headquarters (Wednesday), Nov. 10 (AP).—Under cover of darkness, the Japanese landed several hundred troops with supplies from barges last Saturday night and early Sunday north of the United States Marines' beachhead at Empress Augusta Bay, Bougainville, headquarters announced today.

The American forces now are in contact with those forces.

Admiral William F. Halsey's headquarters, in amplification of General MacArthur's report, said the Marines had thrown tanks against the counter-invasion troops and the Japs were using 90 millimeter mortars.

The landing point was located as 4 to 7 miles northwest of Cape Torokina.

21 Barges in Landing

The Japs went ashore from 21 barges which possibly made the southward run from Buka, on Bougainville's northern tip, under protection of a heavy cruiser and two destroyers. Yesterday's communique had reported low level torpedo attacks by Australian-manned Beauforts on these warships during which the destroyers were believed hit.

The landing was made at Atsinima Bay and near the mouth of the Laruma River. The river forms the northern edge of the beachhead where the Marines landed November 1 on the last big enemy-held Solomon Island barring the way to Rabaul.

No interference with the landing operation during the dark hours was reported. On Sunday afternoon, Navy dive bombers and fighters and Army Mitchell medium bombers pounded the barges and landing area.

Today's communique said "numerous barges" were destroyed or damaged.

Jap Gun Posts Raided

Marine artillery joined in pounding the barges.

Bomber formations attacked Jap gun positions and supply dumps south of the beachhead. That is in the direction of the bypassed enemy garrison at Buin. There were no indications, however, that the Marines had made contact with the enemy there.

300 Nip Internees Were After Control, Official Declares

Tulelake, Calif., Nov. 9 (AP).—A partial "cleaning out" of buildings of the vast Tulelake Japanese segregation camps has disclosed an undetermined number of weapons, including home-made bombs and hundreds of knives.

That was learned through unofficial sources, but Lieut. Col. Verne Austin, commanding Army troops which took over administration of the camp, would say only "no comment" to questions.

The search, by soldiers, still was in progress and is expected to require another day or two.

Hints from inside the camp indicated there were disturbances of an undisclosed nature late Sunday and yesterday, but whether these were a consequence of the search for weapons could not be learned.

One source said "considerable trouble" had been expected when the military search started.

[F. de Amat, Spanish consul at San Francisco, acting on behalf of Japan, made an inspection tour of the camp last week in company with H. Merrill Benninghoff, a representative of the State Department, the International News Service reported. It added that the visit followed a German broadcast of a Tokyo dispatch stating that Japan had asked Spain, its protecting power in this country, to protest alleged mistreatment of Japanese internees.]

At the State senatorial investigation hearing today Robert Cozzens, regional director of the War Relocation Administration, said WRA rules did not compel Japanese in the camp to work.

"We cannot require them to work," Cozzens said in answer

Congressional Streamlining Is Proposed

By Robert C. Albright

A serious effort to streamline the outdated maze of complicated congressional procedure and pyramidal committees was launched yesterday in House and Senate.

Identical joint resolutions were introduced in both Houses by Senator Francis Maloney of Connecticut and Representative A. S. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma, both Democrats.

They proposed a joint study by a 12-man bipartisan committee of antiquated practices and duplicating operations and functions that have mushroomed over the years.

The joint group would report back a plan for "strengthening the Congress, simplifying its operations, improving its relationships with other branches of the United States Government and enabling it better to meet its responsibilities under the Constitution."

The resolution was referred to the Rules Committee in each house, with both Maloney and Monroney expressing hope that it would meet a brighter fate than many past attempts to bring congressional operation up to date.

Maloney pointed to recent action of the Senate Appropriations Committee, in hiring experts from the General Accounting Office to help in the committee's work, as "a step in the right direction."

Monroney told newsmen he believed overlapping committee functions were in particular need of attention. He said he believed, too, that Congress should provide active committees with more technical assistance, so they can hear "both sides of every case." At present, unstaffed committees often receive only the Federal bureau side, said the Oklahoman.

Direst Battles Coming in '44, Churchill Says

Warns Solemnly Against Relaxing in Hope of Early Peace

By William Smith White

London, Nov. 9 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill soberly cautioned the Allied peoples today against relaxing in hopes of an early peace, and, predicting that 1944 would "see the climax of the European war," he said that both the United States and Britain must be prepared for great sacrifice of life.

In his first speech since the Russian armies smashed Hitler's line along the Dnieper River and his first since the accord was reached by the Allies at Moscow, Churchill foresaw Germany's "impending ruin," and declared that he regarded "this hour as at once more hopeful and more stirring than any through which we have passed."

"It is a reasonable assumption," he continued, "that unless we make some grave mistake in strategy, the year 1944 will see the climax of the European War.

"Unless some happier event occurs on which we have no right to count and the hand of Providence is directed by some crowning mercy, then 1944 will see the greatest sacrifice of life by the British and American armies, and battles far larger and more costly than

Nips Face Disaster In Southwest Pacific Losses, He Declares

By John G. Norris

Japan has been dealt a series of stunning military defeats in the Southwest Pacific during the past ten days which threaten to knock the enemy entirely out of that area, Secretary Knox said yesterday.

Declaring that the Nipponese face "disaster" as a result of their mounting warship losses, the Navy chief revealed that not a single Allied vessel was lost in delivering these heavy blows against the enemy fleet.

His analysis of the situation in the Southwest Pacific—portraying the strategic effect of the recent actions—led observers to conclude that a major Allied victory is in the making there though much heavy fighting may be ahead.

"I think a conservative survey of what has happened in the South Pacific in the last 10 days warrants a statement that the Japanese are in a more critical condition than they have ever been before in this area," he said at a press conference.

"It is no longer a question of just holding their outposts at the lowest possible cost, but is one of actual survival."

Japan has received three important military defeats in this area,

Hull Scheduled To Arrive Today

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who yesterday was affectionately dubbed the "gallant American eagle" by Prime Minister Churchill, is flying back to Washington and is scheduled to arrive today.

Announcement of this was made yesterday by Undersecretary Edward R. Stettinius, jr. He said that Mr. Hull and members of his party had flown the South Atlantic and had arrived at Puerto Rico. They were to spend the night there and then take off for Washington.

Used Film Stars as Front

D. C. Hotel, Night Clubs Bilked Of $20,000 by Dark Swindler

By Adele Bernstein

One of the most daring and best-planned swindles to be pulled off in Washington was disclosed last night, as the search was on for a "short, dark-haired man with a limp" who registered for one of the best suites in the Statler Hotel a week ago Monday and disappeared Sunday night, leaving elegant baggage, broken movie contracts and the depleted bank accounts of his "contracts" as evidence of his grand-scale operations.

The known victims, still dazed and unbelieving, include Ole Olsen of Olsen and Johnson's "Sons o' Fun," 20 of the show's cast, Warner Brothers, an unknown number of Washington's largest night club operators and the Statler Hotel itself.

Other victims—though they may not yet know about it—are Bette Davis, John Garfield and Pat O'Brien, Warner Brothers' stars who were used as "fronts" for the missing man's one-week assault on this city's credulity and pocketbooks.

French Committee Removes Gen. Giraud as Co-President

Algiers, Nov. 9 (AP).—In a sweeping move which coincided with the reopening of the consultative assembly, the De Gaullist-controlled French Committee of National Liberation ousted Gen. Henri Giraud as its copresident today.

Giraud, the old soldier who always said he was not a politician, remained, nowever, as commander in chief of France's fighting forces.

The committee also ousted three other commissioners, Gen. Alphonse Georges, who was chief of staff of the defeated French army in 1940 and commissioner without portfolio in the committee; Dr. Jules Abadie, commissioner of education, and Finance Commissioner Maurice Couve de Murville.

Seven new faces were added to the new line-up, in which the Communist Party refused an invitation to take a place because of what Andre Mercier, Communist member of the consultative assembly, called undercover methods used in its formation.

"We favor discussion in broad daylight before taking a responsible post," Mercier said.

Ordinarily, the committee's official meetings are announced pub-

War Sidelights

Disorders In Germany Reported

Stockholm, Nov. 9 (AP).—A Swedish newspaper, in contact with sources within Germany, said today that disturbances, including the shooting of a number of persons, occurred in several cities yesterday after Adolf Hitler's beer cellar speech.

The Handels Sjoefarts Tidningen of Goeteborg, named the cities as Essen, Cologne, Duesseldorf, Mannheim, Hanover and Hamburg, all in heavily-bombed areas, where morale suffered a serious blow and where hundreds of foreign workers are employed in war industries.

Such reports could be part of a propaganda scheme to create overconfidence among Allied nations, it was pointed out.

Churchill Lauds Press

London, Nov. 9 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill today praised American and British newspapers for their "very full and vivid information from all the theaters of war."

Nazis Expect Attacks

Madrid, Nov. 9 (AP).—Germans in Spain expect the next Allied moves to be launched simultaneously on several fronts, a Madrid source said last night.

The Nazis are said to believe the Allies have sufficient manpower and equipment available to make attacks at several points at the same time.

A report from occupied France said French guerillas were operating within 25 miles of Vichy and that some underground agents had managed to filter into the Atlantic anti-invasion zone.

Vatican Hits Bombing

London, Nov. 9 (AP).—Pope Pius XII will send a note to both the Germans and the Allies on the aerial violation of Holy See territory, the Vatican City correspondent of the German DNB agency said last night.

In a broadcast recorded by the ministry of information, the agency quoted the Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano as saying: "It is to be hoped that the evil custom of flying over Vatican City will at last be ended and the nationality of every plane which does fly over Vatican territory will be quickly and effectively ascertained."

Curb on FCC's Power Asked by CBS Head

William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, said yesterday that unless Congress limits the authority of the Federal Communications Commission over the radio industry there is danger the Government soon may tell the American people "what they can hear on the air."

Paley, in testifying before the Interstate Commerce Committee, asked them to "reverse the effect" of a recent Supreme Court decision upholding the FCC's so-called antimonopoly regulations.

Senator Smith (Democrat) of South Carolina said that from the majority opinion delivered by Justice Frankfurter "one wouldn't know the bill Congress passed."

Germans Seeking To Bottle Up Mihailovic Force

By Richard G. Massock

London, Nov. 9 (AP).—Strong German forces are seeking to bottle up the Yugoslav army of Gen. Draja Mihailovic in western Serbia, his headquarters reported tonight as the Russian advance toward the Rumanian border heightened tension in the Balkans.

With the Germans anxiously watching for any possible Turkish aid to the Allies, a report from Istanbul said 4000 Bulgarian guerillas were battling regular army troops in the mountains of Bulgaria near Stara Zagora. The Turkish report said the guerillas had notified Sofia they would fight until a new government which would break away from Germany was formed.

A dispatch from Cairo said Greek soldiers were fighting on Greek soil for the first time since the Nazis overran the country, the dispatch saying Greek detachments were operating on the Aegean island of Samos, captured by the Allies in September.

Heavy Fighting Reported

In Yugoslavia heavy fighting was reported between Mihailovic's forces and combined German-Croatian-Ustachi-Bulgarian units. A report to the Yugoslav government-in-exile at Cairo said the enemy force was advancing from the upper Drina Valley in an attempt to outflank the Patriots and cut Mihailovic's forces in western Serbia from his troops in Montenegro, Bosnia and Hercegovina.

The fighting was heaviest in the mountainous district of Tara on the right bank of the Drina River and in southwestern Serbia. The Yugoslav leader reported his detachments still were holding the town of Visegrad, 43 miles east of Sarajevo, Zvornik on the Drina, 50 miles northeast of Sarajevo and the lower reaches of the Drina.

Gen. Josip Broz (Tito) reported that his Yugoslav Army of Liberation was fighting the Germans in the Sarajevo region also, and that the Nazis, after bringing up strong reinforcements, had expelled the Partisans from the small town of Visoko, while other German forces were advancing from Ogulin, 30 miles east of Fiume, in an attempt to retake territory freed by the Partisans.

Believed Communists

Like the Partisans of Tito, the Bulgarian guerillas are believed to be generally leftists, perhaps with Soviet leadership. Daily reports reaching Istanbul from Sofia tell of Russian parachutists and sea-borne troops landing on the Bulgarian coast.

Allied warplanes operating from Italian bases aided the guerillas in Yugoslavia Sunday night with a raid on the Albanian port of Durazzo.

House Naval Group To Hear Mirandas Testify Today

The House Naval Affairs subcommittee investigating the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. today will hear the testimony of I. J. and A. J. Miranda, large Brewster stockholders, as it enters its fifth week of inquiry into the corporation's failure to produce planes for the Navy.

Other witnesses will be Joseph Green, special assistant to the Secretary of State, and Howard Exton, also of the State Department, who has replaced Green as official in charge of munitions control. Both will be asked concerning export licenses granted the Miranda brothers and their partner, F. William Zelcer, who has previously testified before the committee.

Chinese Exact Heavy Toll On Two Japanese Columns

Chungking, Nov. 9 (AP).—The Chinese high command admitted tonight that one of three Japanese columns fighting on the central Yangtze front had penetrated Chinese lines but said the other columns had been checked with "heavy sacrifice" to the invaders.

On the Burma front warplanes from Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's Fourteenth U. S. Air Force in support of Chinese ground troops blasted at Japanese shipping and air communication bases, while India-based Allied planes raided Japanese targets in northern Burma.

The scale of the Japanese operations in Central China caused speculation as to whether the invaders might be aiming a thrust toward Chungking. The advance of the Japanese was in the same direction they took last May when it was believed they might be launching a drive on Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's headquarters.

The high command said one enemy column had penetrated into the mountains about 40 miles south of Ichang, a Yangtze River port.

A Fourteenth Air Force communique said General Chennault's Sky Dragons sank a Japanese destroyer and four other vessels in the former treaty port of Amoy on Sunday and blasted the enemy airdrome at Kiungshan on Hainan Island yesterday, destroying four parked planes and damaging others. The raids were carried out without loss.

Warspite Hit, Report

London, Nov. 9 (AP).—The famous battleship Warspite was brought into Gibraltar yesterday in a damaged condition, the Berlin radio said today in a dispatch from La Linea, Spain. Gray Resigns as Coal Aide, Charles Potter Named to Post

Ben W. Gilbert

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes announced last night the resignation of Howard A. Gray as deputy solid fuels administrator and the appointment of Charles J. Potter as his successor.

Gray, 65, will retire. Potter, 35, an expert on coal and presently assistant deputy and chief of the coal distribution unit of the Solid Fuels Administration, also was given the job of deputy coal mines administrator to act as operator of the Government-seized pits until they are returned to their owners.

Ickes holds the titles of Solid Fuels Administrator and Coal Mines Administrator, but Potter will do actual administration.

One of his first problems, it was learned, is to decide a controversy between coal operators and the United Mine Workers as to whether the country's coal miners are entitled to a retroactive payment of $40 each under the War Labor Board decision approving the agreement signed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and Ickes.

Representatives of operators' organizations have advised mine owners who are now acting as Government managers of their own property not to pay out the $40. The UMW has advised its local union officials that the $40 is due in monthly instalments of $10.

Confusion arises out of the fact that the Ickes-Lewis agreement specifies that the retroactive payment "shall not be applicable to the Government." The UMW contends that it is a liability against the operators, since it was accrued before the present period of Government operation started.

Potter also will be asked to untangle other technical questions involving an interpretation of the Ickes-Lewis pact before it can be put into full effect.

He is now conferring with representatives of operators and miners on these questions.

Meanwhile, production of coal continued to soar back to normal.

Gray entered the Government service in 1933 as chief inspector for the Public Works Administration, which was headed by Ickes. He subsequently became director of housing for PWA, and later assistant administrator of PWA. He was appointed director of the bituminous coal division in 1939 when it was absorbed by the Department of Interior. Last year, he took on the additional wartime job of Solid Fuels Administrator which became his sole job when Congress refused to renew the life of the bituminous coal division at the end of the last fiscal year.

Potter, who holds degrees from the Missouri School of Mines at Rolla, Mo. and West Virginia University, was assistant chief of marketing of the bituminous coal division from 1938 to 1940.

From 1940 until recently, Potter was assistant to the president of the Rochester & Pittsburgh Coal Co., Indiana, Pa. He returned to Government service as a consultant and then was placed in charge of coal distribution.

44 Nations Pledge Aid to War Victims

By Christine Sadler

In the historic East Room of the White House representatives of 44 united and associated nations yesterday signed a solemn agreement to feed, clothe, shelter, give medical treatment and furnish other rehabilitating assistance to crushed victims of Axis aggression—the aid to come as soon as the captive countries are liberated.

President Roosevelt said the pact will hasten victory and build the foundation for a secure peace. Coming on the heels of the Moscow declarations, he declared, "this agreement shows that we mean business in this war in a political and humanitarian sense, just as surely as we mean business in a military sense."

Historic Scene

The representatives sat around a large table covered with green felt, below a brilliant array of the flags of their countries. The President sat in the middle and chatted briefly with each as he came up to sign the first real international post-war document. Countries signed in alphabetical order. Sir Owen Dixon, Australian Minister, affixing his signature first and Constantin Fotitch, Yugoslavian Ambassador, coming last.

By the alphabetical arrangement, three of the "big four" United Nations—Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom, and United States—signed in succession. President Roosevelt signed for this country, Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, for the United Kingdom, and Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko for Russia. Dr. Tingfu F. Tsiang, chief political secretary to the executive Yuan, signed for China.

About 250 persons, including members of the Cabinet and Supreme Court, congressional leaders of both parties, Vice President Wallace and uniformed heads of the military services watched the 45-minute ceremony. Mrs. Roosevelt was among the observers, as was Herbert H. Lehman, special presidential assistant, whom the United States will nominate as director general of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration—official name of the international body brought into existence by the signatures.

President Roosevelt spoke for 15 minutes following the signing, his address going on the air at 12:30 o'clock. Since the signatures had taken eight minutes less than the allotted time, he suggested the pen-wielders chat among themselves for that period.

English Predominates

English was the predominating language during the chatting period and will be the official language at the first meeting of UNRRA opening this afternoon in Atlantic City—to work out ways and means for putting the agreement into effect.

The Atlantic City conference, to which each of the 44 countries has sent delegations, will be the largest international gathering ever held on American soil. About 250 secretaries and personnel from the State Department are already on the scene to help run the month-long working conference.

President Roosevelt said the 44 signers represented 80 per cent "of the human race," all now united "by a common devotion to the cause of civilization and by a common determination to build for the future a world of decency and security and peace."

"It would be supreme irony," he asserted, "for us to win victory and then to inherit world chaos simply because we were unprepared to meet what we know we shall have to meet. We know the human wants which will follow liberation. Many ruthlessly shattered cities and villages in Russia, China, and Italy provide horrible evidence of what the defeated retreating Germans and Japanese will leave behind."

With One Purpose

The enemy has carried on its campaigns of plunder and destruction, he said, with one purpose in mind: "That in the lands they occupy there shall be left only a generation of half-men—undernourished, crushed in body and spirit, without strength or incentive to hope—ready, in fact, to be enslaved and used as beasts of burden by the self-styled master races."

Responsibility for alleviating the suffering and misery occasioned by this "new order," he declared, must be assumed not by any individual nation, but by all the united and associated nations acting together.

"No one country could—or should—attempt to bear the burden of meeting the vast relief needs—either in money or in supplies," he declared.

The more quickly liberated countries have law and order restored and their peoples back to a "normal, healthy self-sustaining existence" the more quickly a secure peace will be possible, he said, "and the more quickly will our own boys overseas be able to come home."

Poker Player Gets Eisenhower Reply To Big Hand Query

Greensburg, Pa., Nov. 9 (AP).—Simon Davis, who wrote Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower telling him about a hand of poker in which he called for and received three kings and a pair of jacks, got this reply, dated October 19, to his request for odds on such a deal:

"Although I'm afraid my power of gauging percentages in filling poker hands is a bit overrated, I do like to figure them in my spare time. I haven't had time to go too deeply into the exact figures of your chances of drawing 3 kings and a pair of jacks—but I'd say they are about 1 in 1,082,900 times.

"Any mathematician will prove that I'm completely wrong, but anyway don't count on doing it in a pinch."

Wife Weeps as She Testifies To Save Life of De Marigny

Nassau, Nov. 9 (AP).—Slender Nancy Oakes de Marigny, 19-year-old girl whose millionaire father was brutally beaten and burned to death last July, begged a Bahamas Supreme Court jury today to share her belief in the innocence of her accused husband.

Rigid British court procedure prevented a point-blank appeal, but with every soft-spoken word, every attempt to maintain her composure, the pretty wife asked indirectly that Alfred de Marigny be acquitted of the murder of Sir Harry Oakes.

Before spectators could catch their breath, Chief Counsel Godfrey Higgs announced that the defense rested and obtained an overnight recess to permit him to prepare his final argument.

Husband Weeps in Cage

The debonair De Marigny, pictured by the prosecution as a devil-may-care fortune hunter who killed his father-in-law because he feared he might lose a share of a vast estate, wept silently in the prisoners' cage when his young wife started her testimony.

But he quickly took control of himself, and was able to flash a look of encouragement on the one occasion when Nancy actually gave way to her emotions.

Striking directly at crown contentions, Nancy declared she never had heard her husband express hatred toward her father and never had been asked to give him a penny. She took particular pains to combat testimony that he caused her to become pregnant while she still was seriously ill of typhoid fever.

She broke down only when she told of receiving word in the United States last July 8 that her father had been slain at his estate, Westbourne. The next day, at Bar Harbor, Me., Nancy said, she received a telephone call from Capt. James O. Barker, one of the Miami police officers summoned to help solve the crime.

Wife Weeps on Stand

"He said he couldn't tell the details on the telephone," she continued, "but added that there was no doubt who the guilty person was." She began crying, and Chief Justice Sir Oscar Bedford Daly called a recess.

"Capt. Barker told me it was my husband," Nancy said when she returned to the stand.

Nancy said neither she nor the twice-divorced De Marigny had asked her parents about their marriage, although "I had hoped to discuss it with my mother."

In Mexico for a honeymoon, she was stricken with typhoid fever. Lady Eunice Oakes, Nancy's mother, in testifying against De Marigny last week, said she and Sir Harry became angry with De Marigny because Nancy became regnant before she was fully recovered.

Referring to the period of recovery from her illness, Higgs asked: "Was there any marital advice from the doctor?"

"Only that I should live normally," the witness replied.

Lady Oakes said the pregnancy had to be terminated because of Nancy's health.

Denies Demands for Money

"Mrs. de Marigny," asked Higgs as he neared the end of his examination, "at any time during your married life has the accused ever attempted to obtain money from you?"

"No," replied Nancy.

"Has he ever made any offers for the use of your money?"

"No. I did invest £3000 (about $13,000) in his chicken farm. I decided to do that myself at the suggestion of my mother."

"Has the accused ever made a statement of hatred toward your father?"

"No."

A few hours after Sir Harry's funeral, Nancy said, Barker, Capt. E. W. Melchen of the Miami police and George Wood, aide de camp to Duke of Windsor, came to the Oakes home at Bar Harbor, and talked to Lady Oakes, who was in bed.

"Both Barker and Melchen talked, saying the assailant had gone to the garage and picked up a stick from a pile of balustrades and went up the outside stairway and hit my father, then set the bed afire with insecticide.

"They said my father was revived by the flames and attempted to fight off the assailant.

"They said he had been in great agony and was finally overcome and a fire was started for the second time."

Both Barker and Melchen had denied on the witness stand that they made such statements.

Nancy added that the officers declared a bedscreen in the room had been upset.

"Therefore, they said, they searched the screen for fingerprints and found my husband's," she related.

A fingerprint which Barker testified came from the screen is part of the Crown evidence against De Marigny.

Leonarde Keeler, private criminologist, retained by the defense, testified earlier that in his opinion the fingerprint in evidence—Exhibit J—was not lifted from the screen, as Barker said.

Keeler's testimony backed that of Capt. Maurice B. O'Neil of the New Orleans police, who said flatly yesterday that the fingerprint did not come from the screen.

1944 to Bring Direst Battles, Churchill Warns in Speech

Waterloo or Gettysburg will be fought."

Of hopes for peace he said:

"A great many people speak as if the end of the war in Europe were near. I hope indeed that they may prove right. We should, however, be foolish and blameworthy if we allowed our plans and actions to be based upon the prospect of an early collapse in Germany.

"There is danger in anything which diverts the thoughts and efforts of any of the Allied Nations from the supreme task which lies before them, namely, that of beating down into dust and ruin the deadly foes and tyrants who so nearly subjugated the entire world to their domination. . . .

"This is no time for relaxation or of thoughts on the joys of peace and victory."

Sure of Eventual Victory

Churchill remained certain of eventual victory.

"This Government came together," he said, "with the sole policy of making war until victory was won. We cannot today exclude from our minds, nor need we do so, the conviction that victory will certainly be won and that not only Germany but Japan will be forced into uonconditional surrender."

He drew a round of applause when he said:

"In the Pacific where the main forces of the United States have been deployed and where Americans, Australians and New Zealanders are fighting together under the inspiring leadership of General MacArthur, many brilliant actions have been recorded and the strength of Japan has been steadily and remorselessly worn down."

The Prime Minister warned Britons that the Germans might yet desperately lash out with "new forms of attack upon this island," and he cautioned against all that might cause what he termed disunity in both Britain and the United States.

"Mortal" Wounds by Russia

He said the Soviet armies had inflicted wounds on the Nazi war machine "that may wel prove mortal," and declared that the back of the enemy's submarine campaign had been broken.

Once again Churchill assured his listeners that he did not consider it part of his duties to break up the British Empire and said bluntly that this "is not the time for persons who have practical war work to do to dream easy dreams of brave new worlds."

Churchill denounced the raising in England of "various party political issues," adding, "We must keep our sense of proportion."

As to America, he went on "This year of 1944 is also election year in the United States. A strange coincidence, but I am sure I speak for all those on both sides of the Atlantic who mean the same thing—and they are numbered in scores of millions—when I say that our supreme duty, all of us, British and Americans alike, is to preserve the good will that now exists throughout the English-speaking world and thus aid our armies in their grim and heavy task.

"If things are said in one country or another which are provocative, which are clumsy, indiscreet or even malicious and untrue, there should be no angry rejoinder.

Importance of Unity

"Not only the fortunes of this fearful war, but also the happiness of future generations, depends upon the fraternal association of Great Britain and the United States, within and without prejudice to the larger world structure that will be erected to secure the peace and freedom of mankind."

Churchill, who spoke in London's ancient mansion house at the annual ceremony inaugurating a new Lord Mayor, saluted the Moscow accord, but did not deal with it in detail—perhaps because he may go more fully into it soon in parliament.

However, he praised the achievements of the three foreign ministers, particularly "that gallant American eagle, Mr. Hull, who flew far on strong wings," and asserted that the results proved to the Russians and the world that the alliance was "loyal."

He recalled that the British and Americans were "doing our best" in the immense and costly job "of bringing forces across the sea and ocean," and added bluntly: "I rate the Anglo-American air attack on Germany as one of the prime causes of extending the ruin of the Hitler regime."

From all this, however, he turned again and again to the one main theme of his address—a strongly cautionary note against hopes of an early end of the war in Europe.

yesterday's communique, were reported by headquarters today to have struck lightly at Allied positions at Lae, New Guinea and to the northwest of there in the Ramu valley.

(Enemy sources reported naval action in the northern Solomons. The Berlin radio quoted Japanese dispatches as saying that three Allied battleships, two cruisers three destroyers and four transports had been sunk in air and naval attacks on a convoy south of Bougainville beginning Monday morning. The broadcast also advanced the claims—none of which were confirmed—that one battleship, three cruisers and "three cruisers or large destroyers" were damaged seriously.)

Italian invasion to crack the enemy stronghold anchored at Cassino on the road to Rome."

The Garigliano River, which the Fifth Army already has reached, is a formidable barrier in itself, Whitehad observed, but he said behind the river rise rugged cloud-capped mountains which the Germans have studded with machine-gun nests, gun emplacements, trenches and infantry positions protected by barbed wire.

An Allied staff officer said that "the enemy troops are reported to have orders to hold at all costs, and that "they hope to keep us here for the rest of the winter and certainly to hold Rome until after Christmas."

(The Berlin radio mentioned a new German line in broadcasts Tuesday, describing current fighting in Italy as a "battle of attrition." Berlin said this action was designed "to cover by delaying tactics the withdrawal of German troops to so-called 'line' by which is meant the main German line of resistance. Naturally nothing is revealed as to where this line will be.")

The Eighth Army advance overran Torino di Sangro, 4 miles northwest of captured Casalbordino and within a mile of the Sangro, and Paglieta, 4 miles west and northwest of Casalbordino and less than 2 miles from the river.

"The new Post does a first-class job of relaxing and informing the reader, too. Its backstage articles show you history in the making. They're full of punch . . . and I feel they bring me the real, inside story of what's happening."

the city of Kerch. (The Reuters correspondent in Moscow cabled that the city was taken, but the communique 12 hours later failed to confirm it.)

3800 Nazis Slain

Russian troops, in fighting in the Kiev, Nevel and Kerch areas, killed 3800 Nazi troops, the communique announced. The German losses in the Nevel sector on the North-Central Front were listed as 1500, and the war bulletin announced that Soviet troops nipped a German counterattack there.

(The London radio quoted Moscow dispatches last night as saying that "another important operation is developing from the brideghead on the Dnieper 50 miles down river form Kiev." The broadcast, recorded in New York by CBS, said that "apparently this advance is aimed at the flank of the German forces under attack from the powerful Russian armored force well to the southwest of Kiev.")

Having fanned out of Kiev in a 50-mile-deep arc, the Russians were aiming for Korosten. Capture of Korosten would cut the last railway short of Poland connecting German armies in the north with German held territory south and west of Viev. Further herding of Nazi troops west and northwest of Kiev would force the Germans back toward the almost impassable Pripet Marshes.

In the area of recently-captured Fastov, on the southernmost of the three-pronged drive from Kiev, the communique said the Russians captured 3000 tons of gasoline, nine railway trains loaded with war supplies and 15 locomotives—an indication of the German sudden and disordered withdrawal.

Among the 80 northern Ukraine towns listed as captured were Sitnyaki, 43 miles east of the communications and iron smelting city of Zhitomir, and Leonovka.

licly in advance, although the sessions are private.

The move was regarded here as designed to increase the hold of Gen. Charles de Gaulle over the committee.

A decree signed by all members ordained the separation of French civil and military authority.

In addition to removing Giraud, Abadie, Georges, and Couve de Murville, the committee replaced National Defense Commissioner Gen. Paul le Gentilhomme, a De Gaullist, but his post was split in two, with former Socialist Deputy Andre Letrocquer, a lawyer, becoming commissioner for war and air, and Louis Jacquinot, local head of the "groupe combat" and son of a former Communist deputy, being seated as navy commissioner.

The committee named Gen. Georges Catroux, former coordinator of Moslem affairs; Andre Philip, former interior commissioner, and Henri Queuille, minister of food supply in the cabinet of Premier Paul Reynaud in June, 1940, as "ministers of state." This was regarded as a move preliminary to relieving Catroux of his post as governor general of Algeria, a position lucrative with potential patronage.

Meanwhile, the reconvened assembly elected Felix Gouin, former Socialist deputy from near Marseille, its presiding officer and completed its organization with the selection of four vice presidents and four secretaries.

The assembly also voted to ask the underground council of resistance to send two more delegates for Alsace and Lorraine.

Japs Dealt Stunning Defeats, Face Disaster in Mounting Pacific Losses, Knox Reports

he declared. They were:

The landing of American Marines on Bougainville Island, who have established their positions and "are getting organized to clean the Japs out of the island."

The night surface battle between Admiral Halsey's forces off Bougainville, in which a Jap cruiser and four destroyers were sunk and two cruisers and two destroyers were damaged, without loss of an American ship.

The smashing air attack on Rabaul by planes of an American aircraft carrier task force and land-based American Army heavy bombers.

Detailing the results of our carrier-based torpedo planes and dive-bombers, Knox said that th naval task force from which they came received "no damage whatsoever" in the action. This gave the lie to Japanese claims to have sunk two American aircraft cariers, three battleships and numerous other Allied ships.

Such claims were the "usual fishing expedition," the Secretary said.

The carrier plane attack on Rabaul was a particularly serious blow to the Japs in that six Nipponese heavy cruisers were sunk or badly damaged by torpedoes or bombs.

"To lose six heavy cruisers right now for the Japanese is nothing short of a disaster," Knox stated. "They have been sending down light forces and have been losing a lot of light cruisers and destroyers, and now they have lost a pretty big percentage of their heavy cruisers.

"If they don't look out, they'll be very short of these very vital craft when they want to go to sea with their whole fleet. The losses at Rabaul may be a very serious thing for them."

Knox announced that of the six Jap heavy cruisers and two light cruisers seen in Rabaul harbor at the time Halsey's carrier planes struck all were hit. All of the heavy cruisers received torpedoes—one exploding—and five of them also received dive-bomb hits. One of the light cruisers was hit by torpedoes and bombs and the other by bombs.

Two of the 15 to 20 Nip destroyers also at Rabaul at the time were torpedoed by the Navy planes and most of the others were strafed. Our carrier-based fighters destroyed or damaged 37 Nip planes. We lost 10 planes.

Japan, said Knox, has not been sending large transports into the Solomons recently but has been using small freighters and barges to reinforce Bougainville. Admiral Halsey's forces, he added, have sunk, damaged or strafed over a hundred of these craft in the past 10 days.

Brig. Gen. Horace S. Sewell, military analyst for the British Information Service here, took a similar view of the strategic situation in the Southwest Pacific yesterday. Though stating that the fighting ashore on Bougainville will be bitter, he declared that the situation there will continue to grow worse for the Japs.

Agencies Should Terminate Own Contracts, Biddle Says

Attorney General Biddle testified yesterday Government agencies should negotiate termination of their own war contracts, and advocated lending public funds "on liberal terms" to business enterprises for reconversion to peacetime production.

Meanwhile, the new postwar adjustment unit of the Office of War Mobilization headed by Bernard M. Baruch, 73-year-old financier, held its first meeting with representatives of procurement agencies to work out a uniform contract termination policy.

President Roosevelt said that Baruch would work out the policy after consulting with representatives of industry and labor, but that actual administration of the policy would be left to the various agencies concerned.

Appearing before a Senate Military Subcommitteestudying legislation for the termination of war contracts, Biddle said confusion and delay would result from a number of agencies becoming involved in contract termination negotiations. Unless this important phase of postwar reconversion is carried out speedily and expeditiously, he said, a tendency toward industrial concentration will not be halted.

"I make this comment . . . to halt and, if possible, to reverse the tendency toward industrial concentration," Biddle said. "I am particularly interested in this aspect of the situation because of the problems that concentration creates under the Sherman (Antitrust) Act."

Declaring his sympathy with objectives of bills before the committee to speed postwar contract settlement, and to assist contractors in reconverting to peacetime work, the Attorney General added, however, that Comptroller General Lindsay Warren's office should continue its "normal powers of post-audit" to protect the public interest.

"I do not think that more than one agency should attempt to participate directly in the settlement negotiations, nor do I think that a settlement made by the contracting agency should be reviewed by some other agency to determine not whether there has been fraud or illegality but whether it is a bad settlement in the sense that the contractor has been paid too much," Biddle said. "I am convinced that any attempt to deal with the settlements in this way will lead to needless friction, confusion and delay. I think this is true even though the reviewing agency is the Comptroller General, for whose ability I have the highest respect."

Biddle said the Government should confine itself to making settlements to prime contractors, although subcontractors might, when necessary, be included in the negotiations.

Safeway Carries Case Against OPA To Supreme Court

The Supreme Court was asked yesterday to decide whether a company protesting OPA regulations has a right to carry its complaint to the United States Emergency Court of Appeals when the Price Administrator fails to act within the time required by law.

The issue was raised in a petition by Safeway Stores, Inc., a grocery chain, which said its complaints were dismissed by the Emergency Court on the ground that an appeal was not permitted until the Price Administrator had denied the protest in whole or in part.

Attorneys for Safeway contended that the "failure and refusal of the administrator to act in accordance with law were arbitrary and capricious and constituted, in fact and in contemplation of law, a denial of the protests."

Tighter Rations for Next Year Predicted

By Walter Wood

No let-up for rationing is foreseen for 1944, Col. Bryan Houston, new deputy price administrator, said yesterday and he declared rationing will be more difficult to administer next year because of the general optimism of the American people concerning the final outcome of the war.

Colonel Houston, "borrowed" from the Army Service Forces to head OPA's rationing department, held his first press conference since coming to Washington last week to succeed Paul M. O'Leary, who resigned to return to the faculty of Cornell University.

"I am not aware of any 'must ration items' for 1944," Houston said, "but on the other hand there will be no letting up. The situation in rationing is going to get tighter."

Questioned about the possibility of tailoring children's ration books —particularly in cutting the number of meat ration points—Colonel Houston said he would "rather see children get too much than to undertake an impossible administrative job."

"Rationing will get tougher to administer because there are less people worried about the final outcome of the war than there was a year ago."

Houston, a heavy-browed Texan and descendant of Sam Houston, avenger of the Alamo, admitted there is a serious black market "all down the line" in counterfeit ration coupons.

He declared the most effective power for combatting black-market practices was in the hands of the American people. The residents of communities throughout the country, he said, can do more to wipe out black markets than men at OPA headquarters in Washington.

Houston said the trend in the future will be toward reducing the number of ration coupons and increase their values. Introduction of the new token exhange system about the first of 1944 will contribute to this end, he said.

A general survey of the food situation is now under way, the ration chief disclosed, to simplfy regulations wherever possible, as well as to correct any inequities discovered.

Asked whether milk would be rationed, Houston said the decision would not be made single handedly by OPA. He did say that he didn't see how fresh milk could be rationed successfully since it must be sold "today or tomorrow" and be kept on shelves.

Bill Seeks Change From War Time In Northern Area

A House subcommittee considered abolishing war time in the Northern States yesterday—so the kids can go to school by daylight.

"Up in our part of the country," said Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota, "mothers have to get their children up by lamplight to get them to school in time. And after they get there, during the winter months, it's hardly light enough for them to read."

He moved to restore standard time north of the Mason-Dixon Line from November through February.

Knutson told the subcommittee that war time forced dairy farmers to rise at 3 a. m., and added that even the cows, "if they have any thinking apparatus, object to being aroused at that hour to be milked."

Homemakers' Guide
Julia says—
Let's do our part!

UNCLE SAM tells us, "Food is the mightiest weapon of them all"—and that statement comes right home to every one of us. Truly, "Food Fights for Freedom" and it's our duty to conserve food, share fairly and plan meals intelligently to help shorten the war. These are some of the ways we can bring Victory closer:
- Waste no food—clean every plate—
- Substitute plentiful for scarce foods—
- Serve the foods that are right for strength and health—
- Accept rationing cheerfully—
- Pay stamps for all rationed merchandise—
- Pay no more than the top legal prices—
- And take it for granted that we'll have to make further adjustments as Victory comes nearer!

But wait—some one says, "Everybody seems to be getting plenty of food except civilians!" The facts are that our Armed Forces get just about 13 per cent of our food production, our Allies get about 10 per cent, our outlying Territories and our nearby Good Neighbors get about 2 per cent—and that leaves 75 per cent for us here at home!
Three full fourths of a record-breaking food production!
ENOUGH FOOD
Enough good food to keep every one of us strong and healthy—if we use our share wisely.
Of course, intelligent handling of food isn't the only thing we homemakers are asked to do, to help speed the Victory. For example, we can:
Release nurses for the care of war casualties by being prepared to take care of the sick and aged ourselves—
Make a determined drive to prevent accidents at home and on the highways—
SAVE AND SALVAGE!
Save and salvage everything that is usable. And that includes taking care of clothing, handling all mechanical equipment gently, making thrift a genuine by-word! It includes going through attics and basements and closets—passing along all unwanted material to the people or agencies who can use them.
Build morale through old-fashioned neighborliness. Don't repeat gossip, talk constructively. Be confident!
BEHIND THEM!
In short, we must do everything we can to make the men and boys who are fighting for us feel that the folks at home are behind them!
Julia Lee Wright Director
Safeway Homemakers' Bureau

"FOOD FIGHTS FOR FREEDOM"
Yes, Food Fights for Freedom! The very course and length of the war depend on it. It can shorten the war. It can write the peace. If we make the best possible use of it. That means we must cut out waste—use every crumb, every drop. We must stretch the available food supply by eating plentiful nutritious substitutes for scarce foods. Let's remember: every time our armies win a victory across the seas, that means there'll be less of some foods at home—not more. Each of us can help Food Fight for Freedom!

D. C. Hotel, Night Clubs Bilked

pending further investigation by the authorities, proceeded to round up the hotel management, the press, the National Theater manager, owners of the Troika and Romany Room and other night clubs, as well as a few Congressmen. To these he announced that Miss Davis and Messrs. Garfield and O'Brien were to arrive in Washington Friday evening to begin shooting a new picture called "Capital Capers."

A series of expensive parties followed, most of them to begin with at the Statler, and on the bill. On Saturday night, the "Warner's representative" showed up at Olsen's birthday party at the Troika, where a large crowd, including Senator "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky and Mrs. Jimmy Doolittle, waited for the much-heralded trio from Hollywood.

That same Saturday, however, after spreading hundreds of dollars of largess at the Statler, the "agent" signed up 20 members of the "Sons o' Fun" cast, ordering the delighted group to report to him at the hotel at 7 a. m. Sunday morning, to begin shooting "Capital Capers"—part of it in front of the Washington Monument—at $25 a day for each player.

Three of the show's top attractions—Lionel Kaye, who plays the auctioneer; Frank Libuse and the Three Pitchmen—had wired their agents to come quickly and negotiate with this Santa Claus movie contracts calling for tens of thousands of dollars.

The younger members of "Sons o' Fun" left Olsen's party early and spent virtually the entire night primping for their screen debuts in the new Davis picture.

Joins the Suckers

Meanwhile, the Washington office of Warner Brothers joined the "suckers," innocently accepting the "agent" at his word as a bigshot from Hollywood headquarters. Several of Warner's local top men were present at the Saturday night party and were all prepared to plaster the town with Davis-Garfield-O'Brien publicity.

First inkling that something was awry came with a 6 a. m. Sunday morning phone call to the Statler's manager from Olsen, who was still smarting from the previous night's Club Bali bill. Before he let his kids report for work on the alleged picture location at the ungodly 7 o'clock time set, Olsen said, he wanted to know just how genuine was this "agent." And, anyway, where in —— were Bette Davis and John Garfield and Pat O'Brien?

The first must be perfectly okay, the manager told him. And as for the stars, ever since Friday evening the Statler had been getting periodic telegrams explaining that their plane had been grounded, first in Kansas City, then some place farther east. But they would unquestionably arrive that afternoon.

By the time someone got around to checking with air transport companies to discover that no such plane was expected in Washington, the well-heeled "agent" was nowhere to be found—neither inside nor outside the Statler.

The "Kids" Showed Up

The 20 kids showed up for their $25-a-day screen parts. One of the girls had bought a new $22 blouse; the boys wore new suits, and everyone of them had spent money for new clothing so they'd look their best and maybe get a long-term Hollywood contract.

At least half a dozen night-club owners had given the "agent" gifts ranging up to $1000 for tip-offs on the stars' coming. The Troika's owners and its top star, Romo Vincent, exchanged words about how much it was worth to the night club and to Vincent to be included in a scene from "Capital Capers"—that, too, the "agent" had arranged. He had cashed several checks at the Statler and elsewhere, on a Burbank, Calif., bank, and three of the hotel's most sought-after suites had been held empty all weekend for the three Hollywood guests.

But by Sunday afternoon he had disappeared, leaving behind in his suite three expensive suitcases, "plenty of good shirts and underwear" and several custom-made suits of clothing.

Estimates are that, with the gifts for tip-offs, cashed checks and money borrowed on the strength of his alleged Warner Brothers tie-up, the swindler left town close to $20,000 to the good—not to mention an unpaid hotel bill for $C00 and miscellaneous entertainment items amounting to hundreds of dollars more.

"Who made these rules?" he was asked, and replied he didn't know.

"What was the purpose of Monday's demonstration?" a Senator asked him, referring to a disturbance November 1, in which a group besieged the administration center.

"A group of around 300 have been looking for control," Cozzens replied.

"Do you consider that that group of 300 held the others (variously estimated at from 4000 to 8000) against their will?" he was asked.

"Yes, to a large extent," Cozzens answered.

Another Senator interjected, "You know that these evacuees have gotten away with thousands of knives?" Cozzens replied. "I've heard it, but I don't think it's true."

"MEDIUM RARE"

Before the war, students of fine whiskey considered Carstairs White Seal something super special. But now—when it's sometimes hard to get—our impressionable fans tell us it tastes even better! We'll admit it's extra-precious today—on account of we're busy making war materials and every drop must be drawn from limited prewar reserves. So when you do get a share of this Perfectly Balanced Blend, savor it reverently—and make it last.

Nazis' Arctic Weather Post Destroyed by Americans

Secretary Knox reported yesterday the destruction of a German weather and radio station off Greenland—an action which may have had an important bearing on summer and autumn success in the battle of the Atlantic sea lanes.

Danish hunters operating as a United States sledge patrol located the German base on an island off the uninhabited coast of Greenland, Knox told a press conference.

Obviously planned as a permanent station, the base included a radio station, power house, emergency generator and radio transmitter, machine gun placements, and well-stocked storehouses. A small supply ship was anchored offshore.

Nazis Attack Patrol

Knox reported that the patrol which discovered the station was attacked by the Nazis. Two of the patrol were captured and a third, Eli Knudsen, was killed. Other members of the unit made their way back to report.

Weather conditions made an immediate attack impossible, but Army bombing planes battered the station.

Meantime, the Germans sent out a force to attack a small weather station above the Arctic Circle, manned only by a few Danes armed with hunting rifles and pistols. Most of the Danes escaped.

One of the captured Danes, Knox said, was asked by the Nazi commanding officer to guide him in an exploration of the barren east coast of Greenland.

Dane Captures German

"The Dane, at the first opportunity, overpowered the German officer and despite the fact that it entailed a 40-day trip by sledge, took him as a prisoner and delivered him into U. S. custody," Knox said.

Meantime, under command of Capt. Carl C. von Paulsen, Cambridge, Mass., two Coast Guard vessels were fighting their way through heavy ice carrying Army troops.

The North Star was jammed in the ice for more than a month. The Northland, however, found a path through the packs and soon reached striking range.

Base Found Wrecked

"Army troops and Coast Guardsmen went ashore and found that the Army bombings had destroyed all main buildings except a small generator shack," Knox continued. The supply ship had been destroyed. No Germans were at the base, and it is believed that those not killed by the aerial attacks had been evacuated, perhaps by transport planes."

"The purpose of the German Greenland expedition," Knox said, "is believed to have been to provide regular weather information for the German air forces. During their mission the two Coast Guard cutters encountered German reconnaissance planes on three occasions and engaged them twice. One enemy plane is believed to have been damaged."

In September, 1941, the cutter Northland captured the German trawler Buskoe and destroyed a German radio station which the trawler's men had built in Iceland.

Attackers Report New Jap Bombs

Somewhere in New Guinea, Nov. 8 (AP).—Seeking frantically for ways to stop the devastating Allied raids on the Japanese air and sea fortress of Rabaul, the enemy has tried something new—aerial phosphorous bombs.

Liberator pilots, returning from yesterday's attack on Rabaul, which resulted in the destruction of 35 enemy planes, said the Japanese fighters swept overhead and dropped bombs which made an octopus-like pattern, 100 feet across. The fliers said the bombs sent streamers of smoke and flame through the air for 400 to 500 feet.

Capt. W. T. Colman Retired by Army

Selfridge Field, Mich., Nov. 9 (AP). Capt. William T. Colman, former commandant at this Army air base, who was convicted by a court-martial of careless use of firearms after the shooting of a Negro private, is being retired, the War Department disclosed today.

The wounding of the soldier set off an investigation of administrative affairs at Selfridge Field which resulted in court-martial of several officers. Colman was reduced in rank from colonel to captain; more severe penalties were meted out to others convicted of ministrative irregularities.

Are We a Nation of Optimists, Pessimists—or Realists?

Even in the darkest days when all the news was bad, it never occurred to the American people that we could lose this war. We just set our jaws and muttered, "We'll show those So-and-So's!"

We planned and lost sleep and set higher goals—and did the impossible, in battle and on the production front.

Which was as American as apple pie or ice-cream.

Crosley war plants, for example, are turning out fighting materials at a rate many times our peacetime peak.

But now this inborn confidence is breeding a kind of optimism that must be kept under wraps or it's going to waste good American lives.

The viewpoint that it's all over but the shouting is a menace to American fighters all over the world. We could take defeats, but can we take victories?

This over-optimism can get us into trouble at home, too, if we don't protect ourselves against inflation. Inflation means that a dollar can shrink to a fraction of the value of a penny.

It means that an apple can cost as much as a farm; a loaf of bread as much as an automobile; a pair of shoes as much as a house.

Americans are going to have 136 billion dollars to spend next year. But there will be only 90 billion dollars worth of goods and services to buy. That means that there will be 46 billion dollars in excess money.

Even after a lot of money has gone into War Bonds, life insurance and other savings, the temptation will be to over-spend in competition with our neighbors.

That's what happened in Central Europe after the last war. It can happen here.

How can we prevent it? By buying only what we need. By checking ceiling prices and refusing to pay more. By paying for as much of the war as we can, as we go, even though the taxes are tough. By paying off old debts. By saving money and buying all the War Bonds we can and hanging on to them.

There has never been any room in America for the pessimist. And there is no room in America today for unfounded optimism. What we need is realism.

There will come a day, of course, when the wartime advances in electronics can be applied to peacetime radio and television; and when the lessons of war in producing rugged, complex apparatus will make Crosley Refrigerators with the Shelvador, and other appliances, finer and more service-free than ever.

But, meanwhile, the more fighting material we produce, the shorter the war will be. Let's get it over! Let's not kill a single American by over-optimism. Let's not ruin ourselves at home by bringing on inflation. Let's be REALISTS!

48 ways to Save Food

Last year more than 30 per cent of America's food supply —nearly one meal in three—was wasted in our fields, processing plants and kitchens, according to the Department of Agriculture.

To help cut down that waste, here are 48 food-saving suggestions. They were culled from thousands submitted by housewives in a "How to Save Food" contest conducted by the Minneapolis Star-Journal and Tribune.

Minnesota and the Upper Mississippi Valley are one of the world's major producing areas of food for victory. In that area the Minneapolis Star-Journal and Tribune are read by more than 330,000 families every weekday, more than 380,000 every Sunday.

For free reprints of these food-saving ideas — or for details on how to stage a "How to Save Food" contest in your community — address: The Minneapolis Star-Journal and Tribune, Minneapolis 15, Minn.

FLOUR PRODUCTS

1 Leftover cooked cereal can be mixed with raisins and spice and used as filling in the core-holes of baked apples. Sprinkle the apples with brown sugar and bake as usual.

2 A good leftover recipe for stale cake and cookies is to break them into small crumbs and mix with cream. Add a little vanilla, place the mixture in the freezing tray of the ice box. A dessert that tastes like ice cream.

3 Instead of making cookies which require rationed ingredients, you'll find that a box of soda crackers, turned into peanut butter sandwiches, wrapped in wax paper and stored in the cookie jar, will satisfy the between-meal snack-snatcher.

4 Use a spatula or scraper to get the last cupcake or muffin from a mixing bowl . . . and a clean finger to get the remaining egg white from an egg shell.

5 When cutting cake, cut what you need in a strip from the center of the cake. Then place the remaining sides together, and the cake will keep moist and fresh longer.

6 Put all odds and ends of leftover dry cereals into an empty cereal package for use as bread in puddings, and as meat stretchers. Or serve it to the children as a new type of cereal.

7 Line custard cups with leftover pie dough, add a bit of leftover jam or jelly and bake. Husbands and school children will welcome them in their lunch boxes.

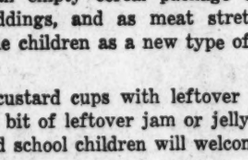
8 To solve the problem of leftover toast, sprinkle it with a small amount of butter and brown sugar, put it under the broiler in the oven for a few minutes. Result? Delicious butterscotch toast that nobody recognizes as leftover from yesterday.

9 Leftover pancake and waffle dough can be utilized as a batter for dipping pork chops, egg plant, squash and other fried foods. It can be kept in a jar in the refrigerator for day to day use.

MEAT

10 Buy 5 pounds of neck bones, which are more plentiful and cost fewer ration points than other cuts. Add ½ cup of pearl barley, salt water, and cook 1 hour. Then add onions, potatoes and carrots and cook another hour. Result: A delicious nourishing soup that saves meat.

11 Every American family should set aside two nights a week for "Victory dinners" consisting of leftovers, especially meat, prepared tastefully.



12 When putting meat through the grinder, finish by grinding a piece of dry bread or crackers. This stretches the meat, besides cleaning the grinder of all meat particles.

13 To keep cured hams and bacon from spoiling and mildewing, make a thin paste of air-slaked lime and water. Dip heavy cloth sacks of suitable size in the paste, put the hams and bacon slabs in, tie the tops shut, and hang in a cool, dry place.

FATS AND SHORTENING

14 To make bacon grease and other fats usable again, boil the accumulated fat in about four or five times the amount of water for five minutes. Let it stand until cold and the fat can be lifted off easily, and scraped clean. This method usually eliminates all traces of meat flavor.

15 Rather than melt shortening in a separate pan, melt it in the pan you will use later for baking. In this way the pan is greased and the shortening melted in one operation.

16 A three-way saving can be effected by using butter wrappers for greasing baking pans. It saves butter, fat and time. Fold the wrappers and place them in the refrigerator until needed.

17 To save shortening, sugar and other rationed foods used in pies and cakes, concentrate more on fruit muffins, coffee cakes and rolls in which leftover fruit juices can be used.

18 Remove the traditional oversize sugar spoon from the sugar bowl and replace it with a smaller spoon. It is surprising how long a bowl of sugar will last.

19 To get all the shortening from the jar, set it, upside down, in a skillet in your oven while the oven is cooling. The shortening will melt and run into the skillet, from which it can be easily removed.

VEGETABLES

20 Freshly grated carrots up to one-fourth of the bulk may be added to any jam or marmalade in which apricots, peaches, pears or oranges are used. The grated carrots take the flavor of the fruit and add a fourth to the amount.

21 Garden peas that have become too hard for serving whole may be cooked until tender, pressed through a sieve and used as a nourishing pulp for soup.

22 The outer leaves of lettuce, cabbage, onions, peelings from potatoes and carrots, and tough ends of asparagus can be boiled down and strained through a circular colander. Add a bullion cube to the mixture for each person served for a nutritious, tasty soup. It also works well as a ham-bone soup.

23 In grocery stores, set aside a special "Bargain Counter" for fruits and vegetables which are beginning to wilt or spoil. Sell them at a reduced price.

24 Wax and green pod beans that have become too fully developed for eating fresh or for canning may be used as dried beans. Thousands of pounds of beans are wasted each year by leaving them unpicked in the garden. Dried beans come in handy for soup boiled with ham shank. Let the beans dry on the vines, then shell them and sterilize on trays in the oven for one hour at 160°-180° before packing in sterilized containers.

25 Shredding head and leaf lettuce instead of serving it whole will reduce food waste tremendously. Often decorative lettuce on salad plates is untouched because of the difficulty in eating it; if shredded, it would be eaten.

26 Those wrinkled, wilted potatoes, the last-of-the-season specimens, can be made smooth and firm by removing the sprouts and soaking the potatoes in cold water for about five hours.

MISCELLANEOUS

27 Truck farmers, rather than sell only the perfectly shaped vegetables, could sell the misshapen ones as "seconds" at a lower price. The food value is the same and much food could be saved.

28 Much of the food that is "saved" in America's refrigerators is wasted because it is forgotten. Keep a memorandum pad on or near the refrigerator to jot down the leftovers inside. Cross them off as they are used. Designate one section of your refrigerator for leftovers only.

29 After emptying a milk bottle, rinse it with a bit of water. Use the liquid in gravies, soups, baking, etc.

30 Local newspapers might run listings in a special Victory Garden Swap Column. Gardeners with surpluses of certain products would advertise what they have to swap and what they would like in exchange.

31 "Feeding us dogs for the duration is a problem. So won't you please take those discarded cabbage leaves, carrot, beet and potato peel, table scraps, dried bread and bones, and make us a dog stew? We'll thrive on it . . . and the garbage pail will starve on it. Thanks, boss—Rover."

32 "Too much food was left on plates at our church suppers by finicky eaters, while hearty men were scarcely satisfied. We instituted a farm style meal with only the meat served on the plate from the kitchen. Everything else was placed on the table, and the people helped themselves. Much food was saved and everyone was satisfied."

33 If spice manufacturers used boxes with covers that could be lifted off easily instead of the present slots, all the spice could be used and none would be lost.

34 Keep a special "Closer to Victory" ration stamp book for unused food stamps. We have drawn pictures of Hitler and Tojo . . . and rather than buy what we don't need with leftover stamps, we plaster Hitler and Tojo with them.

35 When food is scorched, don't throw it away. Set the pan in cold water; the food will come away from the sides and the scorched taste will be hardly noticeable.

36 After commercial canning factories have harvested the crop of peas, beans, etc., farmers should invite town-folk to glean the fields. An example is Jordan, Minnesota, where cellars are stocked with food all gained from gleaning.

37 "I told my three children that it was unpatriotic to leave food on their plates. So I said: 'The one who cleans his plate will be credited with shooting a Jap!' It works."

RESTAURANTS

38 Restaurants could save food by placing meat on a separate platter instead of on each customer's plate. Thus leftover meat could be more easily utilized.

39 In cafeterias which are operated on the self-service system, the tendency is usually for the eyes to be bigger than the stomach. Why not place a sign along the counter cautioning customers to take only what they can eat?

40 In restaurants, hotels and cafes, waitresses and waiters when clearing the tables, should place dishes with untouched butter on top of the pile. This butter can be used for cooking. In many cases, I have seen the butter dishes placed at the bottom of the pile.

41 To save bread and satisfy a variety of tastes, bakeries could make a 3-in-1 loaf, especially for families of two. One part should be white, one raisin and one dark.

42 When certain foods are in abundance, restaurants and hotels could feature them on menus and urge customers to order them as the patriotic thing to do.

43 Restaurants could save food by serving only one slice of bread or one roll with each meal because many diners-out eat little or no bread. The menu could state that more bread would be served on request.

FRUITS AND SALADS

44 Use leftover fruit juices to make a tasty maple syrup. Thicken juice from canned pears, peaches or apricots by cooking slightly and adding a small amount of maple extract.

45 To use leftover jams and jellies, add water and a little corn starch to thicken. Pour this sauce over cake that has become slightly stale and serve as a new dessert. It tastes best when the sauce is warm.

46 Freeze leftover juices from canned fruits and vegetables in the ice cube tray of the refrigerator for use later in soups, beverages, gravy, desserts and salads.

47 At company dinners, serve the salad first as an appetizer instead of a side dish. Many times a side dish is left uneaten because the person says he is "too full."

48 In canning, choose the jar sizes according to the family's tastes. Can food everybody likes in quart jars and food that is not liked by all members of the family in pint jars. Pint jars are especially adapted to families of two or three.

4000 Hail Peace Objectives Of Mission on World Order

By Robert Tate Allan

More than 4000 citizens from 400 Washington and suburban Protestant churches yesterday enthusiastically hailed the Christian Mission on World Order, and were reminded of their moral obligation toward a just and lasting peace.

They packed Calvary Baptist, First Congregational and Mount Vernon Place Methodist churches to hear and to be heard on the issue of winning a Christian peace after their sons and daughters and brothers come marching home. The Moscow parley and the Senate-approved statement of postwar aims were highly praised at all sessions.

Moves to Richmond

The local Mission, sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches and the Washington Council of Church Women, was one of similar missions being held this month in 102 cities under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches, New York City. The Mission moves to Richmond, Va., today.

Speakers on the Mission "team" here were Representative Walter H. Judd of Minnesota, one-time medical missinoary to China; Dr. Henry Hitt Crane, pastor of Detroit's Central Methodist Church; the Rev. Ewart E. Turner, former pastor of the American Church in Berlin; Dr. Herman J. Sweet of the International Council of Religious Education, and "team" captain, and Mrs. Paul Erdman wife of the editor of the American Mission Press in Beirut, Syria.

Barriers to Winning Peace

From the pulpit of historic First Church at 10th and G sts. nw., Dr. Crane last night declared that economic, racial, national and religious prejudice are barriers to winning the peace.

In a ringing appeal for moral heroism, the Detroit minister assailed racial prejudice, an issue that he said was a "cancer" in the life of his own city.

Recalling the recent race riot in Detroit, Dr. Crane said he disagreed with those who say that the race problem is a sectional issue.

Earlier in the day, he led the Senate in its opening prayers. He is a nephew of Dr. Frank Crane, noted preacher of another generation.

Representative Judd, also speaking at First Church, called for a clarification of our war and peace aims, and said that religion was the only answer to the problem of a just and lasting peace.

Dr. Turner, close friend of Martin Niemoeller, the German pastor, said to be now in prison, addressed the youth rally at Mount Vernon Place Church, and said that Germany's future rested in the hands of its Christian and anti-Nazi minorities.

The colorful rally, arranged by the Washington Federation of Christian Youth, opened with a procession in which service banners from many congregations were carried. The Navy chorus sang, and Pvt. Byron W. Bevilhymer, recently returned from the fighting fronts, gave testimony of the value of religion in his life. Women of the Marines and Coast Guard ushered, and Hugo Eskildson, president of the Federation of Christian Youth, presided. The Rev. Jacob C. Oglesby, assistant pastor of Nineteenth Street Baptist Church, offered a prayer.

There was a democratic atmosphere about th emission here, and at the day sessions at Calvary Church the rank-and-file citizens got a chance to put in their "two-cents worth" about postwar peace plans. The Federal Council of Churches' six pillars of peace were the basis of discussion.

Senator Put on Spot

One lady attending the Calvary sessions put Senator Connally, luncheon speaker, on the spot, with this "$64 question":

How are we going to stop from using force in international relations when we have to use force at home to curb strikes?

The Senator, coauthor of the Connally-Smith antistrike legislation, said that was a hard question to answer. It is the Senate's place to make the laws, not to enforce them, he replied.

There was a "grass roots" hominess to the day sessions, where delegates pitched in and helped prepare and serve a box luncheon, cleared their own tables, and carried their dirty dishes to the kitchen. Senator Connally ate his box luncheon alone. Business on the Hill delayed his arrival at the church.

Targets in France Hit

London, Nov. 9 (AP).—Typhoons, Spitfires and Mustangs staged offensive patrols over France today and damaged a number of locomotives in German service and attacked other targets. A Mosquito's guns destroyed an enemy aircraft over Denmark in another operation, the air ministry announced. Four RAF planes failed to return.

$1375 Bond Loot Found In Sewer

In the foggy mists of early morning yesterday police groped in a sewer at 13th st. and Ridge pl. se. for several minutes. They brought up a bundle of papers, neatly tied with a little ribbon. Then they drove away.

The mystery was cleared up a few hours later in Municipal Court when Pvt. Francis E. Burgess of the Eleventh Precinct took the bundle, which was $1375 in war bonds, a little dirty, but still very good.

Burgess said he learned the location of the bonds from Francis R. Purdy, 17, of 1630 Q st., who was held on a housebreaking charge. Burgess said Purdy entered the apartment of Miss Audrey Anderson, 1704 16th st. se., and took a strong box.

But to Purdy's disappointment, Burgess said, the strong box only contained personal papers and the bonds. Purdy told police that the bonds went into the sewer, the papers into the muddy Anacostia River.

Judge Walter J. Casey in Municipal Court held Purdy under $2000 bond pending trial on November 23.

Court Enjoins Wholesaler in OPA Action

Charging that Walter Brown & Sons, Inc., meat slaughterer here, continued to violate price ceiling regulations after the company was indicted in June, the Office of Price Administration yesterday asked District Court to issue an injunction to prevent future violations and obtained a temporary restraining order from Justice F. Dickinson Letts.

The suit, filed by District OPA Chief Attorney John L. Laskey, charged the agency had received information from retailers here that the Brown firm has "frequently and flagrantly" violated OPA regulations in the sale of veal, lamb, mutton and variety meats.

The OPA states that "defendant will continue to violate the act and regulations by selling or delivering or offering for sale" various types of meats in violation of regulations. It is further stated that such acts will be "injurious to the war effort of the Nation with respect to the wholesale distribution of said commodities, will be detrimental to the national progress against inflation and will affect the general public" which will be "coerced into paying prices in excess of those permitted."

The alleged overcharges ranged from 5 cents to 29¾ cents a pound of meat.

The retail meat dealers whose affidavits were filed with the court are: Sam Cafritz, owner of the Shoreham Market, 2618 Connecticut ave. nw.; Paul S. Geberman, copartner of the Mayfair Market, 1804 D st. ne; Mrs. Clara Sherby, owner of the Trio Supply Market, 511 Morse st. ne; Mrs. James E. Jones, employed at the Little Butcher Shop, 2904 Florida ave. nw.; P. Niosi, owner of C. Nosi & Co., 507 Morse st. ne., and Edna Fischer, employed at the E. T. Goodman Stand, in the Arcade Market.

Another D. C. Man Bitten by Dog

Another person was bitten by a dog in Washington yesterday, while the Health Department judged two additional dogs rabid. One was known to have exposed its owner to the disease.

The latest victim was Vahan Garabedini of 1644 Hobart st. nw., who, police said, was bitten in the backyard of 1022 9th st. nw., and released from Sibley Memorial Hospital after treatment.

One of the dogs, whom laboratory tests disclosed to be rabid, was from the neighborhood of the 1700 block of 16th st. nw. He had licked the hand of its owner which was injured by a cut.

The length of time elapsing between contraction of the disease and exhibition of symptoms was well illustrated in this case, the Health Department pointed out. The dog had been exposed four weeks ago to an animal diagnosed as rabid by the department.

The second dog, a stray, was declared rabid after mice had been injected with fluid from its head and became rabid. Microscopic tests had clearly shown infection.

Animals pronounced rabid in the District this year now total 81, and persons known to have been bitten by them, 90.

Citizens Oppose Renaming Streets

The Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution opposing the renaming of 15th and 17th sts. below K st., Vermont and Connecticut aves., respectively, as proposed by the National Park and Planning Commission. The Association warned against "confusion," and declared the change of names would impose "unnecessary hardship on the businessmen on these streets."

Legislation requiring the registration of bicycles was favored by the association.

Funeral services for Robert Augustus Tron, 48, assistant general counsel in the office of Comptroller General for more than eight years, were held at the S. H. Hines Co. funeral home last night following his death from a heart ailment at Georgetown Hospital Monday.

The body is being sent to Valdese, N. C. for burial tomorrow.

Mr. Tron received AB and LLB degrees from George Washington University in 1922. He was appointed a clerk in the office of the War Department auditor in 1919 and has been with the General Accounting Office since its creation in 1921. Men Discharged From Navy to Get Button for Lapels

Former officers and enlisted men of the Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard, separated from active service under honorable conditions since September 9, 1939, will be issued an honorable service button to be worn on civilian clothes, the Navy announced yesterday.

The buttons may be obtained without cost by applying in writing to the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Navy Department, Marine Corps Headquarters or Coast Guard Headquarters here, or in person to any Naval training station, Naval receiving station or Naval hospital. Former Marines may apply personally to any Marine Corps Procurement Office and former Coast Guardsmen can make application to District Coast Guard Offices. Enlisted men must present their discharges while officers must submit the original and a certified copy of the orders placing them in inactive status.

Similar Army buttons are now being manufactured and may be available for distribution next month.

The Boys Must Salute

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 9 (AP)—Military police from San Diego to Los Angeles have been instructed to arrest soldiers who fail to salute commissioned officers. Lieut. Col. Gustave B. Appleman, Camp Callan executive officer, said the orders were issued as the result of numerous complaints.

Prayer for Plane Answered on 50 Raiding Missions

A 23-year-old Army major and his veteran crew—the oldest 25—told the story of the "Coughin' Coffin," a B-26 Martin Marauder, last night and its 50 missions over Tunisia and Sicily.

To the major it was "easy" bringing his plane and crew safely home . . . twice with one engine dead, another time with 272 flak holes in it and a third time on two of the plane's three wheels.

The pilot, Maj. William R. Pritchard of Mobile, Ala., flew the fleet twin-engined bomber from America in November last year. He brought it back to Bolling Field Saturday.

"Jinxed" from the day of its test flight when it refused to fly right side up because of sputtering, missing engines, the Marauder completed its assignments without losing a single crew member. Nor were any men who ever flew with it wounded while it downed eight German planes, sank an Italian cruiser and an 18,000-ton transport and a 10,000-ton merchant vessel.

For the first time last night when the officers and crew were interviewed was it revealed that Maj. Joseph R. Klein, also 23, of Paradise, Tex., Pritchard's co-pilot, was one of General Doolittle's picked crew for the Tokyo raid.

Klein, despite valiant African work which won for him the Silver Star and an Air Medal with six Oak Leaf Clusters, still bemoans the fate which "grounded" him on the Hornet when Doolittle and the 15 other planes took off to bomb five Japanese cities. His plane's motors died before the take-off from "Shangra La."

With Pritchard at the "introduction" party last night were Capt. Clarence W. Sanders, 23, Kenner, La., navigator, and Sergts. Herman Pacheco, 25, turret gunner, holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross, Purple Heart and Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters; Herman D. Snedegar, 24, engineer-gunner of Lewisville, Ind., winner of an Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters, and Harold F. Young, 24, radio-gunner, of Wapeto, Wash., Air Medal with six Oak Leaf Clusters.

Pritchard and the crewmen made no claims for their skill nor for the ruggedness of their airplane. They attached their good fortune to a simple prayer scrawled on the nose of their plane by a mechanic before they left America. It said:

"God bless the crew of this plane. I'll say a prayer for your safe return."

School Officials To Meet Saturday

"Our Postwar Schools" will be the discussion topic led by Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools, at the superintendents' conference luncheon to be held Saturday at George Washington University.

Dr. Richard Foster of the research division of the National Education Association will be guest speaker.

Asthma Mucus Loosened While You Sleep

Say Thousands of Sufferers

Choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma ruin your sleep and rob your blood of vitally important oxygen because you can't get air in and out of your lungs properly. But now it is no longer necessary to suffer from these terrible attacks without the benefit you may receive from a physician's prescription called Mendaco. Within a very short time after the first dose, Mendaco ingredients start circulating thru the blood, thus reaching the smallest as well as the largest Bronchial tubes where they usually quickly help liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. In fact, Mendaco has proved so successful in helping thousands of sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma that it is sold under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. So get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c.

The CROW'S NEST

War and peace . . . the Colonel's old spring . . . reserve stocks

Old Crow has lived through nearly a century of war and peace—but the quality that endeared this famous brand to former generations still endures . . . The War between the States found Col. James Crow already established on Glenn's Creek, Frankfort, Kentucky.

Until America entered the present war, Old Crow was still being made on the same site, even using the same limestone spring which Col. James Crow used in distilling his first batch of whiskey.

Today, of course, Old Crow has gone to war. The Old Crow Distillery is devoted entirely to the production of alcohol for war purposes, and the Old Crow you now buy comes from reserve stocks made before the war.

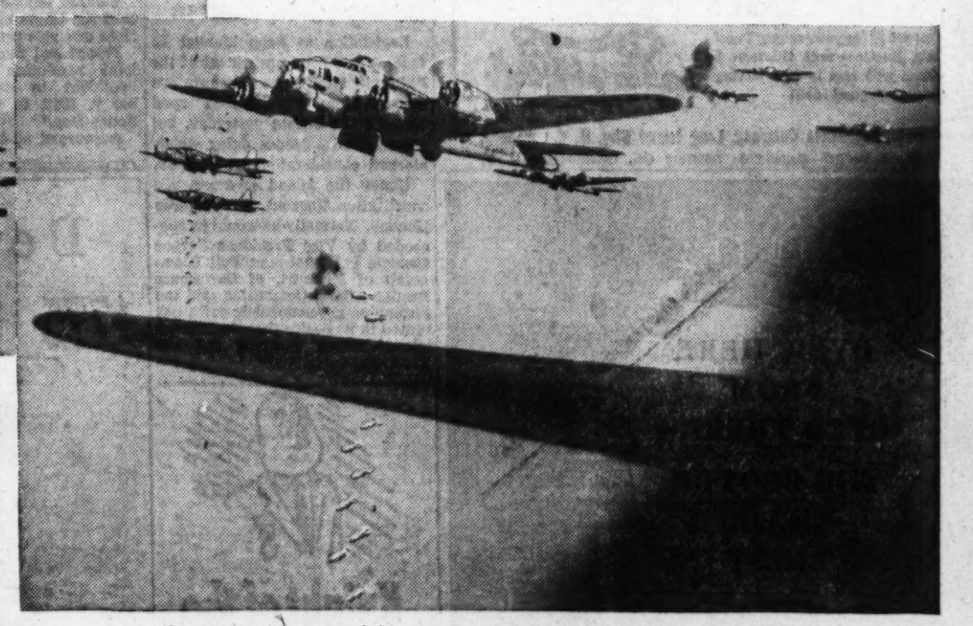
The Relay Race to Victory...

THE "BIG INCH"...THE "BIG POND"...THE "BIG PUSH"

The "BIG INCH"...greatest oil pipe line, stretching from East Texas to Pennsylvania, is 24 inches in diameter, 1254 miles in length and one of the fastest engineering and construction feats in history—350 days from start to finish! Close to 160,000,000 gallons of oil are required to fill this gigantic system.

The "BIG INCH" crosses historic Brandywine Creek in Valley Forge weather. Built through swamps, forests, rivers and over mountains—through penetrating cold and scorching heat, the "BIG INCH" marks a victory over fear and doubt, over submarine and torpedoes, even over nature itself!



The "BIG POND." Across the sub-infested Atlantic, under the sharp sights of men-of-war escorts, a bridge of stubby little ships, their hulls cargoed with oil, speeds the "bloodstream of war" to our Allied Invasion Armies. Two out of every three tons of supplies sent overseas are petroleum products.

The "BIG PUSH" is preceded by Air-Force demolition... heavy bombers burning 200 gallons of gasolene an hour at cruising speed. "BIG INCH" oil means enough and on time of the vital petroleum derivatives... super-octane gasolene, lubricants, greases, fuel oil, butadiene for synthetic rubber, toluene for T-N-T. Here, open bomb-bays spell finis to a German fighter-plane base.

Texas to the East to the Allied Invasion Bases ...from the Steel Heart of "Big Inch" flow 300,000 Barrels of Oil in Twenty-four Hours.

The "BIG INCH" is a steel pipe line. It carries a 1254-mile river of oil all the way from rich Texas oil fields to the east where branch lines deliver the oil directly into refinery tanks in the Philadelphia and New York Harbor areas.

These refineries heat the crude oil, separate it into its chemical units, and rearrange them in countless combinations—and out of this engineering legerdemain come super-octane aviation gasolene, toluene for T-N-T, butadiene for synthetic rubber, lubricating oils, waxes, fuels, asphalt and dozens of other petroleum products...without which, today, no war could be won!

To get these petroleum products to our Army and Navy when they want them and where they want them, a readily available reservoir of oil on our east coast must be constantly replenished.

Little more than a year ago, Axis subs were sinking Allied tankers much too often, and railroad tank cars were already overburdened. It was then Harold L. Ickes, Petroleum Administrator for War, who had for months urged the construction of a sub-proof, non-sinkable gullet for oil, saw his pipe dream come true.

The War Production Board finally flashed the green light by allocating the necessary steel — the Petroleum Industry furnished, free of cost to the Government, all plans, designs and surveys for the pipe line which, long before Pearl Harbor, it had stood ready to build and privately finance.

War conditions had now made it necessary for refineries to operate under directives in order that needed war materials might be efficiently produced. In the changed picture, it had become impractical for the Industry to finance the line. However, Jesse H. Jones, Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, told the Petroleum Industry of the Government's willingness to fully finance and own the line, which had now become an essential war project.

Eleven oil companies formed and staffed War Emergency Pipelines, Inc., a non-profit organization, to act as the Government's agent in constructing and operating the system. This huge task of construction and operation could not have been accomplished without the untiring efforts and guidance of the staff of the Petroleum Administration for War.

Contracts were let—pipe line contractors and crews were assembled—steel pipe began to flow from the rolling mills—thousands of "pipeliners" flocked to the construction job—and the dirt began to fly...

Then—the battle against time and nature...through open fields, dense forests, oozing swamps—over mountains, under river beds, through scorching heat—penetrating cold—storms and floods...across eight states, the battle scar for freedom grew.

The first actual construction work began on August 3, 1942. On July 19, 1943, the final weld in the "BIG INCH" was made at Phoenixville, Pennsylvania. In exactly 350 days one of the greatest engineering and construction feats in history had been accomplished . . . so that OIL—the bloodstream of war—would flow freely again!

"BIG INCH," gigantic speedway of the nation's oil resources, is indeed a personal investment in victory for every man, woman and child in America.

And "BIG INCH" also helps assure equal distribution, here at home, of that portion of our country's oil supply not requisitioned for war.

Again the winning home-team of Government and Industry, working shoulder to shoulder for victory has helped bridge another gap in the battle for freedom and peace.

ICC Studies Service Annex Plea for Lowered Bus Rates

By John Singerhoff

Final arguments for and against a joint Army-Navy demand for uniform reduced bus rates between Washington and service annexes in Virginia, particularly the Pentagon Building, were presented to the ICC yesterday.

Spokesmen for both the Army and the Navy in oral arguments and in reply briefs reiterated their contention that District rates should prevail.

Attorneys for the Capital Transit Co. and two Virginia lines, the A. B. & F. and the A. & F. Transportation Co. countered that the rate is justified and that the services failed to show, either on the record or in their briefs "that the present schedule of fares in unfair or unreasonable for the services rendered."

Exempt, State Contends

The Commonwealth of Virginia also contended that the two Virginia companies "are exempt from the commission's jurisdiction in the proceedings and that the petition should be dismissed.

At the present time travelers from Washington to the Pentagon Building, the Navy Annex, the Army Air Forces Annex and the Washington National Airport pay 5 cents additional to the regular fare. The Capital Transit Co. argued that the Pentagon operation is a losing one and that a reduction of the rate would be discriminatory.

Employe Turnover High

The Army said the employe turnover at Pentagon was about 36 per cent greater than at local buildings and that theturnover rate at the Army Air Forces Annex at Gravelly Point was 107 per cent higher than the District.

Excessive transportation costs were blamed by both services for the high employe loss.

No indication was given yesterday when the ICC decision on the petition will be handed down. The final arguments were heard by a nine-man panel.

Paper Says Hitler Gave Order to Bomb Vatican

London, Nov. 9 (AP).—The banner headline of the London Daily Express tonight declared "Hitler gave order to bomb the Vatican."

The newspaper's foreign editor, Charles Foley, said that Hitler's assertion in his beer hall talk yesterday that "I am a religious man" supplied the clue.

"This surprising exclamation, following so closely on the Vatican raid," Foley wrote, "makes it clear that Hitler staged the outrage as an offset to the Moscow conference offer of liberation for Catholic Austria if she will break away from the Reich."

Quezon Measure Delayed in House

Legislation to keep Manuel L. Quezon in office as president of the Philippines until the Japanese are driven from the islands sped through the Senate yesterday, but encountered a House delay which blocked consideration until today.

Under the island government's constitution Quezon's term expires Monday. Normally he would be succeeded by Vice President Sergeo Osmena but Chairman Bell (Democrat) of Missouri, of the House Insular Affairs Committee said the Philippine government-in-exile was united in its desire that the present administration continue for the duration.

Lead Roles in Gounod's 'Faust' Presented With Lyric Fervor

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Charles L. Wagner's production of Gounod's "Faust" in Constitution Hall on Tuesday night with the following cast:

Faust ..... Armand Tokatyan
Mephistopheles ..... Nicola Moscona
Marguerite ..... Hilda Burke
Valentine ..... Mack Harrell
Siebel ..... Mona Bradford
Martha ..... Renee Norton
Wagner ..... Frank Gamboni
Conductor: Giuseppe Bamboschek

Staged with the usual inconveniences inflicted upon opera in Constitution Hall, Chales L. Wagner's touring production of Gounod's "Faust" was well received last evening by a large audience. Making due allowance for scenic sets that did nothing but constrict an already constricted space, and compelling one's imagination to supply the missing elements of theatrical illusion, one was able to enjoy in some degree a performance that had no serious musical flaws. With such seasoned singing actors as Armand Tokatyan (Faust), Nicola Moscona (Mephistopheles) and Hilda Burke (Marguerite) sustaining the dramatic tension and so experienced a conductor as Giuseppe Bamboschek timing the movement, it was hard for anything to go disastrously wrong.

The three leading roles were sung with competence lightened by movements of real lyric fervor. Miss Burke made Marguerite fittingly demure and in that character her handling of the ballad of the King of Thule was more effective than her treatment of the jewel song. Nicola Moscona followed the traditions of Mephisto sedulously but was not particularly impressive as the Prince of Darkness. Armand Tokatyan simulated the romantic lover with more caution than abandon.

Two fresh voices were noted with approval. Mona Bradford as Siebel disclosed a pleasurable tone that has rondure and warm color, and when she has disciplined it to greater steadines it will serve to her advancement. Mack Harrell had the originality to make Valentine a rather naive and timid person rather than the usual blustering soldier, and displayed a voice that has volume and sweetness.

As I have never seen an uncut performance of "Faust," which is not "an opera in four acts" but in five. I was prepared for the cuts of the scene in Marguerite's room with Siebel, and the scene in the cathedral. The former can be omitted without detriment, but the latter is quite essential to what little psychological reality the opera contains. As for the Walpurgis Night and the ballet, they are apparently banished for good.

Tydings Would Gear U.S. Spending to Income

A constitutional amendment intended to prevent governmental spending from outrunning income was proposed yesterday by Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland.

Under Tydings' resolution, Congress, except in time of war, could not appropriate more money than the estimated revenue, "except by a vote of three-fifths of each House, taken by yeas and nays." If larger appropriations were needed, Congress first would have to find the additional revenue.

WASTE PAPER

Without your waste paper, mills cannot make enough overseas shipping containers. Without containers, the supply lines carrying food, medical supplies, and military equipment to the fighting fronts will fail to deliver on schedule. Today, the shortage of waste paper is so acute that many war plants making containers and other weapons of war have been unable to operate on full schedules. Some have had to cut down to 2 and 3 days operation per week. It is everyone's patriotic duty to relieve this shortage that affects every phase of the war effort!

Mills need an additional million tons this year. Save every scrap of waste paper to help win the scrap. Help America "deliver the goods" to the fighting fronts!

Always Faithful!

The anniversaries are crowding us very hard this week. To begin the week, there was the Bolshevist revolution of November 7, 1917. Then there was the Munich putsch of November 8, 1923, which, because of Herr Hitler's custom of celebrating it by a speech, usually has to be noticed (though, thank heaven, we may not need to notice it next year). Yesterday was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the abdication of Kaiser Wilhelm II, and tomorrow, of course, will be the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Armistice of 1918.

Even so, we must find space today for the observation of still another anniversary, quite as important as any of those mentioned. It was exactly 168 years ago today that the United States Marine Corps came into being. Out of that beginning has grown what is probably the finest body of elite troops in history. It is one that no doubt will have as great a place in legend as the Templars, or the Janizaries, or the Old Guard, or the Foreign Legion. The present war had barely begun before we learned anew, in the tremendous story of Wake Island, what Marine valor means. Again there was the demonstration of how literally all Marines interpret their own motto, Semper Fidelis! These and succeeding engagements have acquired even greater connotations of glory than the "Halls of Montezuma" and the "Shores of Tripoli." Certainly they represent greater claims to the gratitude of their countrymen.

UNRRA

The conference of the United Nations and the countries associated with them, which held its first formal meeting at the White House yesterday and is to continue its labors at Atlantic City, is called a relief and rehabilitation conference. That purpose of and by itself is of tremendous importance. Country after country has been ravaged and despoiled by the Germans and the Japanese, and, judging by what the Nazis are doing in regions they have been forced to give up, the end of this tale of wanton destruction is far from over. Thus the world that will sooner or later be liberated from Nazi and Japanese barbarism will be a world full of starving people lacking the means to provide themselves with food, clothing, shelter and work. The task of putting the occupied areas back on their feet will inevitably be of such magnitude as to be beyond the capacity of any one nation to do. The job, if it is to be done well, must be done cooperatively.

But the United Nations relief and rehabilitation conference represents a purpose beyond its eleemosynary title. It is a test—the first great test—of the capacity of the present great war partnership to work together in the days of peace that are to follow this war. As President Roosevelt has so well said, "It would be supreme irony for us to win victory and then to inherit world chaos simply because we were unprepared to meet what we know we shall have to meet." The fact that 44 nations representing 80 per cent of the human race have signed the relief and rehabilitation agreement and are participating in the conference is a hopeful sign. The will to cooperate is there. The ways and means of doing so must now be worked out.

Futile Inquiry

The appointment of five members of the War Labor Board to investigate the wartime cost of living and report within 60 days can only be regarded as a move to stave off action on demands for wage increases outside the "Little Steel" formula. Otherwise the inquiry is superfluous. For the reliability of the Department of Labor's living-cost index as a gauge of changes in the national average of living costs for city workers has recently been attested by a picked group of experts appointed by the president of the American Statistical Association.

Patently no national index, however carefully constructed, can measure changes in the living costs of individual families or allow for regional variations in such costs. Nor is it feasible to make allowance in living-cost computations for the prices paid in black markets. Living-cost figures covering basic necessities are highly useful in determining whether a given wage is adequate to meet the essential needs of workers for food, clothing and housing accommodations. But any attempt to establish a close correlation between changes in living costs and wages would be futile because putting more money into the pockets of wage earners will not alleviate meat shortages, add to housing accommodations in war centers or provide new and fancy types of clothing.

The amount of goods available for civilian use is limited by the demands of war. Hence living standards are bound to suffer in wartime. The extra dollars designed to compensate workers for a rise in living costs would merely add to the pressure on price ceilings of the existing inflated volume of money income. The result would be still higher prices, more black markets and further demands for wage increases.

Culminating Point

Marshal Stalin on Sunday appeared to give inspiration to Mr. Churchill's forecast yesterday of the "impending ruin" of Germany. But, though the Prime Minister envisaged 1944 as the year for the final clash, the Russian leader seemed to be more sanguine. "It is obvious," Stalin said, "that the real second front in Europe is not far off." The assurance of the man in the Kremlin will renew the hope that the convergence of the victorious attack may occur before winter comes. All the signs seem to indicate to the amateur strategist, at any rate, that what Clausevitz calls the "culminating point" of the war has arrived. Such an impression will be fortified by the speech delivered Monday by Adolf Hitler. In marked contrast to the exuberance of the Allied leaders, the Fuehrer spoke like a cornered rat, and it is evident that he has become an advanced case in psychopathy. To protest the toughness of one's own nerves, as Hitler did, is hardly to persuade even the Germans that those nerves are not near to breaking point. Stung by the success at Moscow, Hitler now calls for a fight to a finish though the threat of mass executions at home hardly seems the way to produce it.

The significance of the Moscow pacts was that they robbed the Nazis of the last center of gravity of their offense. They hoped to the last that they could split the Allies. That hope has now vanished. Aside from the moral blow which this failure has administered to Nazi leadership, as is evident from Hitler's shrill overprotestations, the military reverses are beginning to promote disorganization within the Reich. With the Russians pushing toward the Polish frontier, hundreds of thousands of German who had been resettled inside Russia will have to be brought home. Then there is the transport bottleneck to cope with. At this stage of the war, as Ludendorff found out, locomotives are more important than men, and all the reports of the Allied intelligence service, which are corroborated from Sweden, show that there is a desperate shortage of locomotives. No matter how brave or united a people, they cannot fight a modern war without tools, and to deprive the Germans of the means of waging war is to deprive them of the will-to-war. This is the object of the air bombardment to which Mr. Churchill justifiably paid tribute. Finally, the feeling that morale is sinking within Hitler's roofless fortress will get a fillip from the Fuehrer's hysterical threats to punish those who will not do or die with him.

To be sure, if a leader is sufficiently ruthless and shows an example he may elicit courage from his people in the face of overwhelming odds. Lopez of Paraguay is a case in point. Lopez took on a whole coalition, and the Paraguayans fought till the nation had been bled white. That Hitler is a leader who can win such devotion is altogether improbable. Ever since he came to power, he has been the tool of the military caste, which took him up as a man who could provide cannon fodder. But the kind of cohesion that the Fuehrer has wrought is what Ludendorff called a "mechanical phantom," resting upon force and drill rather than upon spiritual integration. It would be dying in the face of both experience and common sense (not to mention the nuge concentration camps) to imagine the German people holding together as one man to the last.

So it looks as if the military strategists themselves must be thinking that the culminating point has arrived. Clausevitz insisted that the test of generalship was to discover it. It was then the bounden duty of the generals to strive with might and main for the decision. For beyond the culminating point the scale can be turned easily, and "the violence of the reverse is commonly much greater than was the forward push." However, the culminating point probably has been reached before the military were ready for it. To what extent the War Department was apprised of what was bound to happen in Moscow (in view of our apparent willingness, vide Stalin's speech, to relent on our opposition to Russia's Baltic claims) we don't know, and probably will not know till hostilities cease. The assumption is that it was kept in more or less the same state of ignorance as the Senate. The Senate appears not to have been taken into State Department confidence in spite of the fact that it was engaged in a debate on the subject matter of the Moscow parley. If the War Department were similarly ignorant, it must have been taken off balance by an event which was equal to a great military victory.

But, whatever the lack of synchronization between the military and the diplomatic arms, the arrival of the culminating point means that military decisions must be expedited. In times like these, all the old desiderata must be discarded. For instance, there is the illusion that we need more land forces than Hitler before we can defeat him in western Europe, some say 2 to 1. Whatever warrant there is in general for the equation, clearly it does not hold true when war has arrived at the culminating point. Attack to the tune of the Moscow agreement, which ends the period of strategic isolation, might have won in 1943. It might still win. This, at any rate, is what Stalin expects and Hitler, in spite of his "come-on" defiance, fears.

Before Subsidies

Stabilization is now all at sea. This must be the approach to the discussion on subsidies. The newly appointed Price Administrator, Chester Bowles, warns the American housewife that she will have to pay a good deal more for some important food products if Congress withholds approval of the Administration's 800-million-dollar subsidy program. Unfortunately for Mr. Bowles, his appeal for subsidies as a means of holding living costs under control coincides with approval of a mine wage contract that will infallibly add to living costs. That is not all. The precedent thus set will make it almost impossible to resist the price-lifting wage demands of the railway employes, the steel workers and the other organized groups. Indeed, Mr. Bowles' most persuasive argument in favor of subsidies—the fact that higher food prices would mean demands for higher wages and would necessitate abandonment of the "Little Steel" formula—has become archaic in view of the events of the past few days.

A stable wage policy is a desideratum of a subsidy policy. Subsidies neither can nor should be employed as a major weapon in the fight against inflation. The OPA published some months ago a pamphlet dealing with the "Essential Role of Subsidies in the Stabilization Program." In that discussion it stressed the fact that in Canada and Great Britain stabilization of the cost of living has been closely linked in policy with stabilization of wages. Lacking a stable wage policy, we should just be feeding inflation fires by paying out subsidies for the benefit of consumers.

Nor do subsidies remove the inflationary threat resulting from a disproportionately rapid rise in consumer income caused by inadequate taxation. Mr. Bowles' campaign to stabilize living costs is, therefore, made infinitely harder by the failure of the Ways and Means Committee to produce an effective tax bill. All these things—wage stabilization, fiscal policy and subsidies—must be linked together to form a firm and integrated system of price control. Mr. Bowles' solicitude for the millions of American families in receipt of fixed salaries and incomes is well taken. But these unfortunates will not be spared the distress and suffering that are the accompaniment of inflationary advances in living costs by merely handing out subsidies.

Kiev And On

Since the fall of Kiev late last week the Russian forces west of the Dnieper have pressed forward at such a remarkable rate of speed as to suggest a considerable measure of demoralization in German ranks. In this particular the sequel to Kiev is similar to what proved to be the sequel at Melitopol. There, as at Kiev, the Germans fought with great tenacity and for days held back the Russian tide. But once the strong point was lost, the Nazis found it impossible to carry out anything resembling an orderly retreat, but fled helter-skelter from the westward-moving Russians.

In any event, the Red army continues to press its advantages. One force has launched a violent offensive on the Perekop Isthmus leading into the Crimea where a German garrison of unknown size is bottled up, its only possible escape being by way of the Black Sea. At the same time another Russian force is now within 115 miles of the Polish border and 140 miles from Rumania. The immediate objective of this drive is Zhitomir, junction of railway lines which the Germans must retain if they are to make good the escape of any large force left in the Dnieper bend.

In the meantime the retreating Germans, harassed by the Russians, are now about to face Russia's old ally, General Winter. Unless the retreat is carried out swiftly, therefore, the serious defeat which the Germans have already suffered will become a major disaster. Even their hitherto successful effort to retain Krivoi Rog, and thus keep open the escape corridor from the Dnieper, may add to the sum of their misfortunes. Certainly it has resulted in the maintenance of a large German force in an area which the Red army threatens to outflank. And, as if all that were not enough, signs are beginning to multiply that the long-stabilized northern sector of the Eastern Front is beginning to crack. The Russians are driving on beyond Nevel to within reach of Polotsk and the Vitebsk-Riga railway. Is there any strategist left who thinks the Nazi retreat strategic?

WILD OATS

Upon the grain you sow with care
That timid and capricious steed
Whose pinions scale the purest air
Can never be induced to feed.

But where good seed was spread by chance—
Scattered from nearly empty sack
Along the aching homeward track,
Or spilt out in extravagance
From nuzzled feedbag in the shade,
Dropped distantly by tameless wind
On stony uplands, ether-thinned,
Or by some bandit bird conveyed—

There, unobserved of mortal eye,
When the mauve mist of twilight floats,
Pegasus browses secretly,
Seduced by wild and random oats.

Lewis' Triumph

By Mark Sullivan

Owners Penalized

ABOUT THE nature and consequences of the course of President Roosevelt and the Administration with Mr. John L. Lewis and his miners' union, probably much is understood by the public. But some implications go farther than, probably, the public realizes yet. To make one serious implication clear, consider the sequence of events.

First: The Government compels the private mine owners to deal with Mr. Lewis and his union—to make contracts with him, and with him exclusively. This compulsion is extremely rigid—the mine owners are forbidden to employ a single miner unless he is a member of Mr. Lewis' union. This compulsion is accomplished by the Wagner Labor Relations Act (passed in 1935), by decisions of the Labor Relations Board under that Act; and also by the decision, two years ago, of a board appointed by President Roosevelt which granted a demand by Mr. Lewis for the closed shop.

Second: Under this compulsion, some mine owners make a contract with Mr. Lewis.

Third: The Administration, through the War Labor Board, vetoes this contract, prevents the mine owners from making it. The reason given by the Labor Board is that the rate of pay fixed in the contract is too high—that it would lead to inflation.

Fourth: In this situation the Administration, through another agency, Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, takes over the mines. Thereupon the Administration itself, through Mr. Ickes, makes a contract with Mr. Lewis. This contract, made by the Administration, gives Mr. Lewis substantially the same wages that the Administration forbade the mine owners to give.

TO SUM that sequence up: Here are the private mine owners willing to give Mr. Lewis an increase in wages. Here is the Administration forbidding the private mine owners to give this increase. And here is the Administration itself giving substantially the same increase.

In that sequence of events are serious implications. One is that, to labor unions, Government operation of an industry is preferable to private operation. To anybody who wishes to bring about transfer of industry from private operation to Government operation, this would seem to be a way to further the process.

Turn to another aspect: For the coal strike, the mine owners were not responsible—they were willing to grant the wage increase Mr Lewis demanded. For the strike, Mr. Lewis and his union had the responsibility.

But who is penalized? Mr. Lewis and his union are not penalized. They are rewarded, they are given the increase in pay they demanded. But the owners of the coal mines are penalized—their property is taken away from them. Logically, if anything were to be taken over by the Government, it should have been Mr. Lewis' union.

ONE ASPECT of the situation is at once serious—and almost humorous. The Administration, in taking over the coal mines, operates them under the same conditions of employment as the private owners. The Administration practices the closed shop and the "check-off." The Administration employs no miner unless he is a member of Mr. Lewis' union. And the Administration deducts from each miner's pay the amount of his dues to Mr. Lewis' union. The dues are paid by the Administration into the treasury of Mr. Lewis' union. Thus the Administration increases Mr. Lewis' power.

The consequence of the Administration's surrender, as respects inflation, are plain and are under way. The Administration, through the War Labor Board, has said that the increase in wages demanded by Mr. Lewis could not be granted—because such increase would carry wages above a level fixed by the War Labor Board as a defense against inflation. Thereafter the increase was granted by the Administration itself, acting through another agency, Secretary of Interior Ickes. In short, the Administration itself raised wages above the level set by its own War Labor Board. The Administration itself broke the level which had been fixed by itself as a defense against inflation.

The consequences are under way. Not only will the price of coal be higher. Other labor leaders, seeing Mr. Lewis win his demand for higher wages, feel obliged to make similar demands. An upward move in the inflationary process is in sight.

Peace Conference

It is quite proper for the President of the Republic of Cuba to extend invitations to all belligerent and neutral sovereign nations for an international peace conference to be held in the City of Havana, Cuba, say in June, 1944, for the purpose of arriving at a pax ad perpetuam between all Nations, relieving same from dictatorships or occupancy under duress.

War And People

Study In Democracy

NOT LONG ago an Englishman, a friend of mine in this country on official business for the British Government, made his first trip from New York to San Francisco. He began the journey by air, was "prioritied" off his plane at Pittsburgh, reached Chicago by coach, was told he would have to wait three weeks to get a berth to the coast—then luckily fell heir to a canceled upper which started him west that same night.

His train was neither a streamliner nor a limited, but one of the good old-fashioned "regular" trains which still carry a large percentage of our transcontinental passenger traffic. The train was jammed. As usual nowadays, there were a great many soldiers aboard. As for the civilians, they were for the most part middle-aged men, or young mothers with children.

"It was a very interesting demonstration of democracy," he said. "In the first place, I was struck by the rapid fraternization—before we were more than an hour out of Chicago, people had made themselves acquainted and the train was pervaded by an atmosphere of companionship.

"IN THE second place, it was interesting to see the efficient and cooperative way in which the women arranged a working system to solve their nursery problems. Each car had a berth made up at all times, in which youngsters could take their naps. Women took turns in watching each other's offspring during the hours when the dining car was open. The spirit of mutual helpfulness was extraordinary and admirable.

"The dining car was rather symbolic of the American way of meeting situations. We all had to line up for meals, of course—the wait was interminable and uncomfortable, 30 to 45 minutes, sometimes longer.

"The soldiers had the right to first place. The first two or three meals they pushed past us noisily, rather ostentatiously—quite superior to all the rest of us . . . young, husky men going past women, children and the aged.

"It was the women who took charge of the situation, and they did it very skillfully. At about the third meal, as soldiers shoved by the line waiting in the narrow corridor, remarks began to be dropped—polite, gentle, but audible.

"'I do hope we're not breeding a generation of selfish, inconsiderate young men.'

"'It does seem a little curious that women and children should stand waiting while our gallant men in uniform have their dinners.'

"THE SOLDIERS didn't quite know what to make of it. One or two were a little hostile, most were rather apologetic and shamefaced.

"By the middle of the next day the whole thing was arranged to everybody's satisfaction. The soldiers had the right to enter the dining car 15 or 20 minutes ahead of anyone else. Those who did were served first. Those who didn't took their places in line with the rest of the passengers—and a few hours after that soldiers all over the train were helping mothers with their babies. By the time we reached San Francisco we were all devoted friends. To me, as an Englishman, it was one of the most wonderful and revealing demonstrations of American life that I have ever seen."

Presumably the solution of the "military priority" problem isn't always so happily arrived at. Sometimes the impulse to treat men in uniform as a privileged class leads to practices of doubtful wisdom, and has its bad effect upon young men who forget that a good many of the oldsters past whom they stride have also worn this country's uniform. The duty, honor and privilege of bearing arms is merely another branch of the democratic function—it falls on the good, bad and indifferent alike, and is not intended to create a "pressure group" of 10 or 12 million which will later expect bonuses and rewards as it now expects to enter dining cars. . . .

But the point is, there are solutions—solutions which can be effected by plain ordinary citizens.

For this is a citizen's war, and many a civilian has greater right to medals than many a man in uniform.

Many a middle-aged married couple, doing a faithful day's work every day, "sweats it out" over the knowledge that "our son" has gone to sea, or gone overseas, or been assigned to a combat squadron.

In that night hour after the light is out, but before sleep comes, they do a second day's work, living in anticipation the dangers and experiences of the young men whose generation is now in uniform.

This is a democracy. Perhaps we should all have gone into uniform, as a symbol of our unity and equality. In any case, we are all equal—all share a common burden—all share the privilege of fighting and winning this war.

Blood Donors

In the November 3 issue of The Post Mr. Louis S. Cramer raised the question of extending the hours of the Red Cross Blood Donor Center. Mr. Cramer feels that the failure to reach the quota of blood donations rests with the Red Cross officials in that we do not maintain evening hours. I think it only fair to explain that with the exception of the medical, nursing and technician staffs all of us are volunteers with other full-time jobs to do and we are as sensitive to the matter of convenience to the greatest number in the operation of the Center as any others could possibly be. Interestingly enough, we have already experimented with later hours during week days and three additional hours on Saturdays, but the results were definitely disappointing and clearly indicated that longer hours do not result in an appreciable increase in donations. True, we remained open only until 8 p. m., whereas Mr. Cramer suggests 11 p. m., but there are considerations which seem to make any other late hour in the evening impracticable.

For one thing, donors are requested not to eat heavy meals within four hours of their donations, and few people are willing to wait so long for the evening meal, which in this vicinity is generally the heaviest meal of the day. Secondly, a manpower problem exists in the operation of the Red Cross Blood Donor Center quite as much as in any other line of endeavor. The Army and the Navy can spare only a certain number of doctors. The other attaches are volunteer women, many of whom have homes and other responsibilities to take care of, and longer hours mean overtime for many individuals, or a readjustment of working hours for the rest of the day, which might impair the efficiency of the center all along the line. Moreover, we must guard against excessive fatigue even more carefully in this work because we feel that donors must not be placed in the hands of people who are overtired since the taking of blood is quite an intimate and personal matter to the giver. Mistakes cannot be made.

I know of no Government agency that will not grant official leave to any employe to go to the Blood Donor Center. This means that the employe may go on Government time and not on his own annual leave. I also know of no large business concern in the city which will not make similar arrangements for its employes.

We do not mean to be abitrary about the matter, and if it had been demonstrated during our experimental period, which ran from April through August of this year, that a large number of persons prefer hours other than 9 to 6 weekdays and 9 to noon on Saturday, we would have tried to make whatever arrangements as to personnel were necessary.

Mr. Cramer is quite correct when he says that we do not have to "sell" the blood donor program to the people of Washington. What we do have to "sell" is consistency and regularity of donations on the part of those who have made one or more visits to the center, and a never-ending reminder to those who have not given that they should do so at once. I think if Mr. Cramer would visit the Blood Donor Center and see for himself the details of the operation he would understand more clearly why our lengthened hours did not produce any great number of donors. If you will permit it, I should like to extend through your columns an invitation to Mr. Cramer and any others, who may feel similarly to go to the Blood Donor Center in the Acacia Building at 51 Louisiana ave. and make themselves known to Mrs. Lorretta Bickford, the director, who will be glad to show them around, make arrangements for their donations and explain any phase of the operation in which they may be interested.

Policing Industry

Your editorial, "Basis for Economy," obviously deals with a most important phase of government finance. In it you ask who is responsible for the frittering away of public money. Your answer, that the contracting officers of the War Department are, seems to me to be incomplete. There can be no gainsaying that they have an important share of this responsibility, but, after all, does not the primary blame for such extravagances as exist rest with the contractors and businessmen who indulge in the practices of padding costs, hoarding labor, etc.?

We have been told so often by important men and representatives of prominent organizations that if business were only let alone by the Government all would be well, that it seems only reasonable to expect common honesty in these contracts with the war effort. Patriotism at least, during such a period, should make rigid policing of industry unnecessary.

Aid To Education

Your editorial, "Legislative Sabotage," of October 22 is the cleanest-cut statement on the bill for Federal aid to education that I have seen.

It deserves Nation-wide circulation.

Food and Farmers

In your editorial of November 5 entitled "Food Subsidies" you make such statements as the following: "The prosperity of the farming population provides no assurance that individual farmers will grow as much as required of the kind of food needed," and "indeed, it is quite sure that they will not do so unless given some financial incentive." Farmers, as a class, are our most patriotic and hard-working citizens. We have no wage-hour law, we work 12 to 15 hours a day and we can and will produce feed for ourselves, our armed services and assist in feeding the world, in spite of lack of labor, machinery, and a superabundance of red tape.

The blame, if blame there be, lays at the door of a Government which asked us last year to produce meat and more meat. Our reply was the largest pig crop on record, and a record tonnage of beef. Many of the latter, by the way, bought at high prices, against our better judgment, because our Government asked it of us. Now we are told by the same Government that we have produced too much and ceilings are put on to control any possibility of a rise in price. We are now told to grow grain. Does not the Government know that it takes a year to put our livestock on the market or to grow a crop of grain? What assurance have we that next year we will not be told that again we have grown too much and be asked to grow fruit during the coming year.

We are bewildered also, as to why the dairymen's request for 1-cent a quart increase in price of milk was turned down with such vehemence and yet John Lewis got a raise of $1.50 a day for his miners so easily. Why do you not say that they won't work unless given some financial incentive, instead of saying it of the farmers? We haven't struck, thereby crippling the war efforts.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Analysis Of The Recent Elections

Nobody, despite all the strenuous attempts, has succeeded in interpreting the sensational upsets in the recent elections. This department herewith proceeds to tear them down:

The national aspect—the overall view—taking into account the elections everywhere in America, clearly shows that a lot of people were too battered and dazed from the struggle for seats on trains and buses to know who was running. The Democratic Party, while not in a blackout, is entering a brownout. The net returns clearly indicate continued difficulties getting a good 75-cent lunch.

* * * *

New York—The landslide for Joe Hanley, a Republican, was a mere triumph of horse sense over Olsen and Johnson. It reflected a pretty wide belief that there would be no more sense giving a Republican Governor a Democratic Lieutenant Governor than there would be to insist that Abbott of Abbott & Costello work for the next two years with Bishop Manning. It showed popular resentment over the difficulty in getting a hotel room in New York overnight, even with Democratic influence.

It clearly demonstrated the futility of President Roosevelt making the long trip to Hyde Park to vote, even when disguised as a tree grower.

The election of Magistrate Aurelio showed a definite trend away from slot machines as a potent influence in American thinking, revealed that there is no popular demand for tapped wires and reflected a firm belief that the wrong lawyers are being tried for disbarment.

* * * *

Kentucky — The results here clearly proved, what we have suspected for years, that people are getting sick of those tobacco auctioneers on the radio and blame Roosevelt.

* * * *

San Francisco—This baffles us It must have been the frequent blackout drills. But why blame the district attorney?

* * * *

Philadelphia—The defeat of Bill Bullitt, former Ambassador to Moscow and Paris, proved that many voters thought "The Last Time I Saw Paris" and "The Last Time I Saw Philadelphia" would go well together. It reflected a feeling that Stalin should not replace Connie Mack.

New Jersey—Here the voters showed once more that the spell of Mayor Hague's dazzling straw-hat bands is on the wane and that Governor-elect Edge benefited from the fact thousands of Jersey voters had listened to Bill Corum's radio eulogies of a razor blade.

Connecticut—The land of steady habits reflects a growing tendency to dislike having to stop and think when asked who's mayor now? Cities like New Haven and Bridgeport, for instance, keep the same man in year after year. We think that in the case of Jasper McLevy, a Socialist once more elected in Bridgeport, it proves that the voters are convinced that no matter who is mayor the railroad depot will still be up too many flights from the street level.

Upsets in other States and cities defy this department, but we think that, as a whole, they reveal in striking fashion a desire to get canned goods with fewer points.

Baruch Appointment

By Ernest Lindley

Excellent In Every Respect

THE SELECTION of Bernard M. Baruch as chairman of the new war and postwar adjustment unit in the Office of War Mobilization is excellent in every respect. Mr. Baruch has the wisdom and experience for the task. Not less important, he always enjoys the confidence of the public, including businessmen. In public life, the best man for the job is not always appointed, sometimes for reasons of political expediency, sometimes because he is unwilling to serve. Mr. Baruch was willing to serve and clearly his appointment was politically brilliant.

LINDLEY

This appointment should put an end to loose, uninformed, and often malicious accusations that the Roosevelt Administration plans to perpetuate the close economic controls necessitated by the war. That sort of talk was used to impede the mobilization of the Nation for defense and even for full-fledged war after Pearl Harbor. It has never completely died down, even though all responsible spokesmen for the Administration and the leading New Deal planning agencies, including the late National Resources Planning Board, have subscribed, not only in generalities but in significant detail, to the demobilization of war controls and restoration of the private enterprise system. Indeed, some of the New Dealers, including Vice President Wallace, are more severely committed than many business leaders to competitive private enterprise. Mr. Wallace's views on the function of the antitrust laws, as set forth in recent speeches, are extreme, but undeniably they contemplate the restoration of a competitive system.

MR. BARUCH'S economic ideas are well known. Because they are well known he could advocate, with complete political safety, the most extreme measures of war mobilization. For the same reason, he is likely to be heard when and if he warns against too abrupt demobilization. The demobilization after the first World War was not well done, even though it was a small task compared to the demobilization after this one. The transition from war to peace could have been handled much more smoothly then. This time an attempt to return instantly to the pre-war system certainly would create chaos. Intelligent men in business as well as in other fields realize this. What they want is the assurance that the controls will be relaxed or abandoned as rapidly as is practicable, and that no specific control will be maintained after it has ceased to be necessary.

Mr. Baruch's judgment on these matters will be treated with respect. As he fought so long and so hard to avert inflation, we may be sure that he will be on guard against the dangers of a postwar inflation due to the premature abandonment of rationing and other controls on the movement of goods and prices.

One group of problems of importance to war industry press for immediate consideration. These center on war contract concellation. They demand prompt treatment for two reasons: (1) because, with the changing needs of the war, contracts are being readjusted or terminated and many more will be when Germany has been defeated, and (2) because many war contractors are genuinely worried about the possible effect of an early termination of the war on the financial conditions of their companies.

AS JUSTICE Byrnes indicated in announcing Mr. Baruch's appointment, this is a war, as well as a postwar, problem. Apart from the general policy to be followed in terminating war contracts, many producers are naturally interested in which plants or companies are to be restored to civilian production first. The first in any particular line to return to civilian production are likely to have advantages in recovering and expanding their markets.

Already we are moving into a period when the output of certain raw materials, hitherto regarded as critical, will yield a surplus over direct war consumption. The production of certain items for essential civilian consumption is being resumed. When Germany has been defeated, some plants now devoted to war production undoubtedly will be released for civilian production, since the war against Japan will not require an immense number of ground troops. The order of demobilization within each industry will be of the keenest importance to every producer in that industry. An equitable set of rules will be needed, even though none can be drawn to cover every case.

Many have lamented during the last three years that greater use was not made of Mr. Baruch's experience and wisdom. He has been nominated unofficially for several offices and probably could have had the most important of them if he had been willing to take them. Actually, he probably has accomplished more as an unofficial counselor to many of the active managers of the war program and by occasional service as a troubleshooter. He has conserved his energy and his prestige, both of which are needed in the difficult assignment he has now accepted.

Gallup Poll

Nation's Workers Expect Peacetime Wages To Average 40% Lower in Converted Plants

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 9.—An overwhelming majority of this country's working people do not expect today's high wage level in war industries to continue once these industries have turned to producing peacetime goods.

Although a few economists believe postwar business will be good enough to maintain the present wage level, five out of six American workers do not agree with them.

This does not mean that workers, especially those who are members of labor unions, won't resist wage cuts, but the Government and other postwar planners will be interested to know that the workers are not counting on a continuation of present high wages paid in industries turing out war goods.

This attitude of workers was brought to light in a Nation-wide survey in which field reporters asked employed persons this question:

Do you think the wages now being paid in industries producing war materials will continue to be as high when these same industries produce peacetime goods?

The results:

Yes	9%
No	85
No opinion	6

Moreover, in general the workers who are now employed in war plants vote the same way. Three out of every four think wages will drop in their plants after the war.

The question naturally arises as to how much workers think the wage decreases will amount to. In this connection, the Institute first ascertained what persons think warworkers are now making, on the average, excluding overtime pay, and then asked them this question:

What do you think the average weekly wage will be for these same workers after the war?

When all of the guesses of workers who think the wage level will drop are averaged out, the estimate of postwar decrease is shown to be 40 per cent, or about $20 below the estimated $50 weekly they think warworkers now are paid. These are median average figures.

Warworkers who think the wage scale will drop made guesses on the decrease which average out at 33 per cent, or about $15 below the $45 weekly they think warworkers now are making, again using median average figures.

What is the minimum that workers themselves think they can get along on after the war? In an Institute survey made during the spring, single warworkers, both men and women, said the very least they could get along on if prices went back to where they were before the war is $25 per week. Married workers, both men and women, set the figure at $35. These figures also are median averages.

President to Send Congress Message On Lend-Lease

President Roosevelt announced yesterday he would send a special message to Congress at noon tomorrow dealing with the subject of lend-lease, especially raw materials and reverse lend-lease.

He told a press-radio conference that the message would go to Congress several hours after a British White Paper dealing with the subject is made public.

The President said a check of the message and the White Paper will show that they were independently written.

It was assumed that both are designed to answer criticisms of lend-lease operations that followed return of five Senators from a recent tour of the battle fronts.

Widener's Will Gives Art Library To Smithsonian

Smithsonian Institution will receive all the books on art in the Lynnewood Hall Library of the late Joseph E. Widener's Elkins Park estate, near Norristown, Pa., the millionaire sportsman's will provides. He died October 26.

The will, not yet formally probated, also establishes a trust to provide income of "$200,000 and upwards," divided equally between a son, Peter A. B. Widener 2d, and a daughter, Josephine Widener.

The contribution to the Smithsonian Institution is bequeathed in two codicils to the original will, which was dated October 29, 1942.

Revenue Viewpoints

Need Is Seen for Rechecking Incentives, Ability to Pay

By James Washington Bell

Head, Department of Economics, Northwestern University; Secretary and Editor of Proceedings, American Economic Association; former Chairman Research Council of Institute of Economic Research; vice president, Economists National Committee on Monetary Policy.

In the light of the heavy tax burden resulting from the 1942 Revenue Act and the 1943 proposals for even higher tax rates, we may well reexamine the objectives of the Administration, that is, "making the tax program an instrument of victory" by checking inflation, maximizing production, and levying "fair and nondiscriminatory taxes" in accordance with "ability to pay."

A reasonable interpretation of ability to pay and the significance of economic or business incentives become more important than ever.

In this period of the Allied offensive warfare, an 11-million-man armed force, lend-lease aid exceeding the amount of our Federal taxes for 1942, and a 100-billion-dollar budget, there is no question of the need for additional taxes. Nor are we in doubt as to the reasons why we should tax to the limit.

As the President has stated, we need "to supply funds currently required to pay for the war and to keep the increase in Federal debt within bounds," and the Treasury needs to recover a large portion of the excess buying power resulting from the disbursement by the Government of 100 billion dollars.

The results of several studies of tax distribution make it clear that little additional revenue can be extracted from corporations and from individuals in the higher-income brackets without impairing both the yield and economic productivity. This leaves only the lower incomes, or possibly a sales tax, as the principal source from which any additional sums may be obtained.

In time of war an ever-larger share of additional revenue must be sought from the great mass of the people, for it is they who have the bulk of income and who receive the major part of the new Government war expenditures. In other words, new taxes must be sought where the accumulation is taking place.

Fixed-income groups, especially those who fall within the middle and lower-income brackets, are a relatively helpless class so far as political power is concerned, and they are very unfavorably affected by wartime changes so far as their ability to pay in concerned.

Teachers and professors, Government civil-service employes (except for the new agencies), white-collar workers in general—these make the biggest sacrifice when taxes or the cost of living go up.

They are not beneficiaries of the great flow of Government war expenditures, and they are not engaged in occupations considered as war industries; their salaries and wages are relatively fixed, if not actually frozen, and as the lawmakers reduce the amount of exemptions and deductions allowed and increase the rates in order to broaden the base so as to catch new income groups, this fixed salary and wage class becomes victim of a powerful force for the redistribution of wealth.

Into New Brackets

The disbursement of huge Government war expenditures has brought large classes of industrial and other workers into new income brackets; many are now taxpayers for the first time. The adaptation of workers from low to higher standards of living has occurred almost overnight. There has been little time and opportunity for these individuals to cultivate new values, nor have they been curbed in their expenditures by heavy fixed charges.

A recent investigation shows that two-thirds of the total consumer expenditures is made by the classes falling within the $2000-to-$5000 income-tax brackets. These are the people who have money to spend on radios, pianos, silk shirts, perfumes, furs, jewelry, and beefsteaks. The inflationary gap is as large as ever, i. e., 42 billion dollars. It is not surprising that consumer expenditures this year may reach 90 billion dollars.

We may be careless or negligent with regard to equity in taxation, e. g., ability to pay or equality of sacrifice, so far as politically "unimportant" groups are concerned, but it is fatal to the war effort to disregard the effects of taxation on the incentive to produce. Above all, we need production—production of both military and civilian goods. The tax system must be examined in the light of its effects on corporate and individual production. The argument for heavy corporate taxes is a purely fiscal one.

Involves Double Taxation

Most war expenditures become corporate receipts in one form or another and the corporation can be used as a collecting mechanism to recover funds before they flow to individual incomes in the form of salaries, wages, dividends, interest, etc. To be sure, this involves double taxation when these distributive shares are again taxed in the hands of individuals, but administrative expediency and yield justify this method of raising money if, as argued, corporate war profits cannot be reached by individual taxes alone since earnings may not be distributed and capital gains may not be realized. But the danger of curbing or paralyzing the profit incentive definitely limits government policy with regard to corporate taxation.

The discouraging effects of income taxes on investments is a matter of common knowledge to everyone familiar with the investment market. The effects have been illustrated as follows: An investor estimates that he has 1 chance in 10 of succeeding in venture A, where success will bring $100,000, and 1 chance in 2 of making $10,000 in venture B. If both ventures are equally attractive to him, ex-income taxes, a steeply progressive tax that will cut down the net reward of venture A by a much larger percentage than B will induce the investor to choose the lesser risk B.

Crowley Is Quoted

The same considerations induce commercial banks to make only sound loans and gilt-edge investments, though these mean but modest profit. Risky advances, though they might enhance income, would net a smaller profit after taxes than would justify the risk.

Mr. Leo Crowley, in the annual report of the FDIC of 1942, adjures the banks to increase their capital so that they may be able to finance business enterprise without shifting reasonable risks to the Government unduly.

He points out that this is particularly necessary in the postwar period if the bankers are to preserve their present system of banking rather than have the Government take over their business. High taxes play a part in the dilemma—they cause banks to seek safety in more or less riskless business, which leaves the way free for Government competition. High taxes make the accumulation of capital difficult and the assumption of risk unprofitable.

Nobody knows how far we can go in abstracting income and the capital from the taxpayer without impairing his productive activity to a point where society gains less by taxes than by his productive effort. This balance of forces varies in times of war and in times of peace.

Profit Not Only Incentive

In peacetime, money-makers, like scientists and inventors, may, and undoubtedly do, bend their efforts to productive enterprise not only for the profit there may be in it but also for the power, social esteem, or prestige that may be gained as a result of "dollar success." Or, the businessman may exert himself to the utmost because of the pride or joy he may feel in working for work's sake. There is no reason to believe that the profit motive is even less of a driving force in wartime, when patriotism and the feeling of group survival comes into play. We can count on this nonpecuniary motive the minute that danger is felt. And it becomes stronger as enemy action threatens and destroys our lives, our property, and our homes.

But some tax experts point out that we are collecting only 30.35 per cent of our national income in the form of taxation, and, being a richer nation, we should do at least as well as the British or the Germans, who are taxing some 50 per cent of their national income.

This is hardly a fair comparison. We are not being invaded, our cities are not being bombed, and our physical safety is not jeopardized as it is in those heavily taxed countries. Perhaps we should tax ourselves as heavily as they do, but it does not reflect upon our patriotism when we do not now choose to do so. As the facts stand, we seem to have reached a point where higher rates are considered a greater hardship than extra effort, greater risk, or even default and bankruptcy

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

Little Sample Of Anarchy

JOHN L. LEWIS' smashing victory in the battle of Washington has brought an outpouring of sympathy for the War Labor Board. That is natural enough, for the board was humiliated and all but destroyed because it followed the law and the President's instructions. But, after all, the board began its existence as an agency of the President. It must be accustomed by this time to having the ground cut from beneath its feet when it takes a stand that is antagonistic to powerful groups having special influence at the White House. Any executive agency which runs up against such problems must be prepared to throw its principles and policies overboard in a crisis or to fold up.

PUSEY

Pathetic as the case of the WLB is, it seems to me that the kick in the teeth which the President has administered to Congress is even more serious. When Mr. Roosevelt first took over the mines last June, Congress resolved that it would not leave the Government helpless in any similar emergency. It passed the Connally-Smith Act specifically designed to give the President a weapon to use against John L. Lewis. But the President and Secretary Ickes cravenly surrendered to Lewis' disloyal and outrageous tactics without once attempting to employ the weapons Congress had placed in their hands.

Congress put the employes of every war contractor under obligation to notify the WLB and NLRB of any labor dispute seriously threatening to interrupt war production. No such notice was given by Lewis or his union. Employes were instructed to continue working for at least 30 days after the giving of such notice to make possible a secret strike ballot. Of course, the miners did not do so. Persons willfully failing to perform the acts thus required become liable for damages to the United States. The United States has been damaged to the extent of 40 million precious tons of coal needed for war. But no suit has been filed and apparently none is contemplated.

THE SAME ACT provides that mines seized by the Government "shall be operated under the terms and conditions of employment which were in effect at the time possession was taken." To be sure, this is qualified by a provision authorizing changes in wages or working conditions upon application by the employes or the operating agency and approval by the WLB. But it would be absurd to suppose that Congress intended this to authorize negotiations with men on strike. When the act was passed the WLB was following a strict policy of not considering the demands of strikers until they went back to their jobs. The surrender to Lewis thus flies into the face of the law—its spirit if not its letter—as flagrantly as it does into the face of the principles laid down by the WLB.

Congress also made it possible to clap John Lewis into jail if he should aid or encourage strikers while the mines are in possession of the Government. "It shall be unlawful," the statute reads, "for any person (1) to coerce, instigate, induce, conspire with, or encourage any person, to interfere, by lockout, strike, slowdown, or other interruption, with the operation of such plant, mine, or facility, or (2) to aid any such lockout, strike, slowdown, or other interruption interferring with the operation of such plant, mine, or facility by giving direction or guidance in the conduct of such interruption, or by providing funds for the conduct or direction thereof or for the payment of strikes, unemployment or other benefits to those participating therein."

LEADERS of the coal strike sought to avoid the fines and jail sentences prescribed for violation of this provision by keeping their strike activities under cover. But the fact that the miners almost unanimously defied the President's order is a good indication that they acted under a general agreement or understanding. Is that conspiracy under investigation? The payment of strike benefits for this revolt against governmental authority is clearly illegal. Is the Government scrutinizing union records for such violations? There is no indication that any action whatever is being taken to enforce the Connally-Smith Act in spite of wholesale defiance of the Government by a ruthless practitioner of the art of rule or ruin.

This is not government by law; it is government in defiance of law. The retreat of executive officials from policies fixed by themselves is one thing. Callous refusal to enforce the law is quite another. The Administration has gravely weakened its hand in dealing with any lawless elements in the future because it too has treated a statute enacted by Congress as a dead letter, without even putting it to the test.

Let us not dodge the ugly implications of this incident. Congress passed a law designed to put John L. Lewis behind jail bars if he attempted to sabotage the war effort a fourth time. The President and Mr. Ickes ignored that law and let Mr. Lewis do precisely what Congress intended to prevent. In effect, then, John Lewis has made the law in this instance in defiance of the will of Congress and the people. What we are witnessing is a sample of anarchy—anarchy that now bears the stamp of approval of the executive branch of the Government.

Soldier Ballot Gains Support

Legislation to vote all eligible servicemen in the 1944 election, regardless of State poll tax or registration requirement, yesterday appeared slated for formal Senate Privileges and Elections Committee approval today.

Already indorsed in principle by the heads of both parties and Army and Navy representatives, the legislation overhauls the ineffectual 1942 legislation which for the first time waived poll tax and registration requirements for servicemen. A four-man war-ballots commission would print the new simplified Federal ballot and clear the votes. The Army and Navy would take the ballots to servicemen, see they were secretly voted, and bring them back.

Besides members of the armed forces, members of the Merchant Marine and civilians attached to the armed forces overseas would be eligible to vote under the plan. Similar legislation is taking shape in the House.

WITH Cap Transit

WE GIVE A HOOT:

While the greater part of the City has generally traveled to Slumberland by midnight, there is always a sizeable segment that's belatedly homeward bound from midnight to sunrise. Some have been working. Some have been relaxing. Some have just arrived in Washington from distant places—but whatever the reason they'd like to get home.

Under the circumstances they think it's a bird of an idea for Capital Transit to operate an "OWL" service throughout the wee-small hours. This all-night "OWL" service may look like a million dollars to many tired people when it comes along . . . but "OWL" services are not maintained so much from the profit motive as from the motive to serve—showing that the transit company gives more than a hoot about its passenger's welfare—even "after hours".

For information about Capital Transit's "OWL" service on any particular line write us at 36th and M Sts., N. W., or telephone our Information Department between 7:00 A.M. and 12:00 midnight any day.

Stocks Rally With Carrier List in Lead

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—The ailing stock market took a turn for the better today as rails and specialties were bid up fractions to 2 points with wider whirls given isolated issues.

Reasons varied for the selective comeback after six successive falling sessions in which Monday's relapse was one of the sharpest of the year. Prices began to harden at the opening when Prime Minister Churchill spiked talk of an early peace, which had been blamed for recent selling, by warning that the 1944 European campaign would be the most severe in the experience of the Allies.

Short covering was an important factor in the comeback and commitments were reinstated here and there on the theory the climactic liquidation of the preceding session may have been overdone and had well discounted much of the industrial confusion which might develop with a quick victory over the Germans.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was up .3 of a point at 47.9, compared with the Monday tumble of 1.6 points. The market was relatively broad, 966 individual issues being traded. Of these, 440 were up, 340 down and 186 unchanged. Transfers totaled 1,507,440 shares against 2,340,180 the day before, which were the largest since May 10.

Distillers were conspicuous on the upswing, American Distilling getting back 5⅝ points of its 10-point drop of the preceding session. Gossip regarding the possibility of some companies declaring dividends in whisky aided this group.

Bonds steadied. At Chicago wheat was up ⅜ to 1⅛ cents a bushel. Cotton jumped 95 cents to $1.10 a bale.

Distillery Votes Whisky Dividend To Shareholders

Baltimore, Nov. 9 (AP).—Stockholders in the Tom Moore Distillery Co. counted themselves pretty lucky people today—what with the whisky shortage—for the concern's directors declared a dividend of 27 gallons of bulk Kentucky bourbon whisky per share.

The net value of the dividend for each $25 par value share was computed at $31.59. The whisky ranges in price, based on Office of Price Administration ceilings, from $1.07 to $1.51 a gallon.

However, the recipients of the dividend now must pay the tax.

Tax officials estimated that State and Federal taxes on 27 gallons of whisky would amount to between $190 and $200, and the company's attorneys said persons receiving the dividend would probably also have to pay income tax on a sum equal to OPA ceiling prices on the amount they received.

Although the par value of the Tom Moore stock is only $25, the shares have advanced 80 points on the Baltimore exchange since late October, and rose 10 points yesterday alone to close at $130. Today the stock was quoted at 139 bid, 143 asked.

War Firms Map Swift Shift to Peace Output

Many steel, shoe and leather, chemical and foundry companies expect to swing into peacetime production swiftly after the war ends, the National Industrial Conference Board reported yesterday.

Between 20 and 30 per cent of all companies surveyed by the private research organization reported they would have no reconversion problems because their wartime product was the same as that turned out in peacetime.

Four out of 10 companies said they would have to reconvert all of their facilities for the postwar period, the board said, including about 45 per cent of the nondurable goods makers and 39 per cent of durable goods producers. These concerns were chiefly processers of steel, petroleum and leather and makers of electrical equipment, shoes and textiles.

Reconversion of half their plants' facilities is expected by about 15 per cent of companies checked, including automotive, machine tool and office equipment concerns. About 6 per cent of the answers, chiefly from chemical and metal products firms, said they would have to change over less than half their facilities.

To a question as to how fast they could reconvert, about one-third of the concerns answered "immediately" or "will take little time." About 13 per cent of nondurable goods makers and 10 per cent of durable goods companies estimated switching over would take three months or less.

Nine per cent—most automobile, electrical, machinery, mining, paper, petroleum and food industries—estimated four to six months. Only 2 per cent said more than six months would be necessary and two concerns said it would take them from 12 to 18 months to change.

North American Net Rises

The report of North American Co. and subsidiaries for the three months ended September 30 today showed net income of $4,606,031, equal after preferred dividends to 43 cents a share on the common stock. This compared with $4,394,934 or 40 cents a share in the same period last year.

For the 12 months ended September 30 the utility holding company's consolidated net income was $18,864,522, equal to $1.75 a share, compared with $19,308,862, or $1.81 a share in the preceding 12 months.

E. L. Shea, president, said that with completion of an emergency expansion program companies in the North American system now were producing almost twice as much electricity as they did when the war broke out in Europe four years ago. Sales of power to industrial customers in the 12 months ended September 30 were up 33 per cent as compared with the previous 12 months and up 144 per cent from the prewar period ended September 30, 1939.

Wage Formula Change Hinted By Roosevelt

President Roosevelt provided a hint yesterday that revision of the Little Steel wage formula may follow the War Labor Board's investigation of the cost of living which he ordered at the behest of labor chieftains.

Asked at his press conference whether he saw any need to change the Little Steel wage yardstick, the Chief Executive replied that the Government was trying to find out to the greater satisfaction of the people what the cost of living and the cost of food really are.

That's what the WLB committee and other agencies that may be called in are trying to do, he said.

Three Bases for Ideas

He pointed out that a person's idea of the cost of living often depended upon his wife, his stomach, or his place of abode.

Previous announcement of the appointment of the five-man WLB cost of living committee had failed to indicate any conection between the cost of living study and the wage yardstick, although a direct relationship has been assumed by some observers.

A reporter started to ask the President whether the yardstick would be adjusted if the WLB group found that the cost of living had increased faster than the c. of l. index indicates, the President interrupted to explain that the reporter was asking an "if" question—a type of query that the President frequently refuses to answer.

Meanwhile, George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, stated once again that 1,100,000 nonoperating railroad workers are prepared to strike for an 8 cents an hour wage increase, but agreed that the net result of setting a strike vote would be Government operation of the carriers.

To Hold Off Strike

Harrison promised that no strike would be called until a "reasonable time" had been given Congress to act on a pending resolution to validate the increase which was set aside by Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson. He appeared before a subcommittee of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, holding hearings on the resolution.

Jacob Aronson, vice president of the New York Central Railroad, told the committee that the carriers "neither approve nor disapprove" the resolution, introduced by Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, but expressed the belief that congressional action would settle the controversy.

Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado, who is conducting the hearings, announced that he would summon Vinson to testify on the resolution.

History of Award

The 8 cents was awarded originally by a special emergency board, but set aside by Vinson. Then the carriers and rail unions signed a contract providing an 8 cents an hour boost, but it never went into effect because the Government failed to act on it. A second emergency board recommended Monday that a sliding scale arrangement—10 cents to those getting 46 cents an hour, tapered down to 4 cents for those receiving 97 cents or more—be substituted for the 8 cents. This was rejected by the unions.

"We are going ahead with our strike vote," Harrison said, "and when the day comes, we shall fix the day to interrupt the transportation system of this nation. When we are convinced that it is hopeless and we are being stalled or given a runaround, we'll put the mandate into effect."

Yule Shoppers Urged to Ship Before Dec. 10

Christmas shoppers throughout the Nation were asked yesterday by Joseph B. Eastmas, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, to complete their buying in the remaining 17 shopping days in November and to mail packages not later than December 10.

In Washington, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association announced it was in accord with Eastman's request. Edward Shaw, secretary, said the association had gone even beyond the ODT's plea for early mailing, and was working with city postoffice officials on a program to get Christmas gifts in the mail by December 1.

Aids Transport Facilities

"Early Christmas shopping and shipping are necessary this year," Eastman said, "to enable the satisfactory handling of the extra Christmas load by war-burdened railroads, postal and express facilities and local transit and delivery services."

Eastman pointed out that because of the war strains on transportation and because of manpower shortages, preventing the usual holiday expansion of mailing and shipping forces, delivery of packages could not be assured before Christmas if the load was concentrated in the few weeks preceding the Yuletide.

War Bonds, Stamps Help

"Persons who give war bonds or stamps will automatically help lighten the holiday transportation load," Eastman said.

The ODT chief called attention to the restricted stocks of merchandise on hand and said shoppers would have a more extensive selection from which to choose if they make purchases this month.

A Washington Board of Trade spokesman said he believed that all residents of the District would heed Eastman's request and that all board members would be urged to cooperate.

NAN BLACKISTONE, as elegant a topnotcher as ever was, opens at Olmsted's Club on Friday. Olsen and Johnson, her old friends, plus their supporting principals in "Sons o' Fun," will be there to greet her. . . . Nan, often billed as the "First Lady of Entertainment," is supported in that awesome position by none other than the First Lady of the Land, Eleanor Roosevelt, who in My Day said: "Her press notices say that Nan is 'gay, 'amorous, most brilliant, terrific with a capital T.' Well, she is!" . . . After that, what is there left for me to say?

Comes Madame Rumor with a matter that Josephine Houston, American singer who was one of the few survivors in a bombed London night club, will open at the Troika in a few weeks.

UNPROGRAMMED THRILLS gave a hot tang to the opening of Lotus' "Can-Can Revue." A sharp electric shock was given to shadowgrapher Ed Rickard when his apparatus tangled. Emitting one agonized yell, he scooted off the floor like a bat out of the bad place. Maestro Bill Strickland soothed things down, quick repairs were made and the temporarily electrified Mr. Rickard returned to give a fine performance. . . . But that wasn't all. The band got mixed on cues, left the can-can dancers in a position I can't very well describe. But it's a good thing no censors were around. . . . Oh, sure, the audience had a wonderful time.

Patsy Garrett, former singing star with Fred Waring's band, which means she's away up there, will open at El Patio next Monday.

MARRIAGE IS AN INSPIRATION to Ed Harris, "Harmonica Rascal" of the Neptune Room. He and his dark-eyed little partner Allen were married just before their appearance at the Capitol Theater a few weeks ago. Now he's invented an electric harmonica, will patent it as soon as he adds a few completing niceties.

Massa Joe Moss of Restaurant "400" will stage something special in the way of Armistice celebrations tomorrow. There'll be novelties, souvenirs, decorations, added diversion, all in the best Moss style from cocktail hour until closing.

ONLY THREE MELODY MEN in town claim the sense of perfect pitch, a gift you're born with, can never acquire otherwise. They're Hi Hat's Jack Neal and the Heintze Brothers of Restaurant "823."

YOU'LL LOVE Carlos Molina's arrangement of "How Sweet You Are" at Del Rio . . . The dreaming that Sid Willoughby and Roy D'Arcy put into "Emperor Waltz" at Burt's Trans-Lux. . . . The dizzy tap stepping of tiny Arlina at the Casino Royal. She nearly knocks herself out; completely knocks out the audience. . . . The barbecued pork and water chestnuts at Ruby Foo's. Yummy is the word. . . . Even Bing Crosby would like the way Georgia and Jerry of the Anchor Room sing "Sunday, Monday or Always" . . . The black-and-silver magic bestowed on "Clair de Lune" by Pianist Bob Brewer of the King Cole Room . . . Vic Nini's velveting up of solovox numbers at Ciro's . . . The delta beat of "Are You Ready?" Les Williams' own composition, played at the Old New Orleans . . . Roy Comfort's violining of "My Bill" (a tune I normally loathe) at the Lounge Riviera.

Nora Williams, ace indigo singer, opens at the Windsor Room tomorrow. You'll remember her as the red-headed leading light of the Lamplighters Club.

OF PRIZE RHYTHM LADS. Washie Bratcher, who jam-crams the Washington Hotel ballroom four times a week, is the blondest band leader in the country—a super-platinum . . . Maestro Felix Zimmer of Paul Young's has stepped into the floor show with a rousing accordion solo . . . Drummer Freddy Browne with Harold Nagel's band at the Carlton, learned his rhumba rhythm first hand in Central and South America as member of an American vaudeville troupe . . . Maestro Bill Grassick of the Metronome Room hails from Mansfield, Ohio, but he cottons to Southern towns . . . Davy Crocker, La Conga's new band leader, used to be the swing king of Washington's excursion boats . . . George Stein of River Bend vows that he's never missed playing a request number in his life—even if he only played six bars of it . . . Watch that new Eddy Fogel band in the Dubonnet Room.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The Notre Dame game is out of the way, albeit not too happily, but Army is now wondering what new trouble may be lurking in the vicinity this weekend. The game with the Sampson (N. Y.) Naval Base wasn't supposed to be one of the big games on Army's schedule, but Army could lose it.

POVICH

Sampson is one of those service teams with a collection of former college and pro stars, and it is coached by Lieut. Comdr. Mal Stevens of Yale and N. Y. U. experience. The Sailors will go up to West Point pretty well loaded with good football players.

The Sampson team was licked, 27-13, by Cornell early in the season, and there was no disposition to regard the Sailors as much of a threat to West Point, but there are some facts that ought to be known. Cornell, it seems, threw the hooks into Sampson by refusing to let the sailors play their former pros, restricting them to collegians. Army isn't imposing any such restrictions. To its credit, West Point isn't barring Sampson's pros.

That means Dom Principe, a back with the Giants for three years, in the Sailors' line-up. Also Frank Hrabetin, 6-foot-4 tackle, who used to play for the Eagles. Stevens will also have Andy Stopper, Villanova's brilliant back; Joe Davis, Southern Cal's Rosebowl end, and Vic Schleich, Nebraska's great tackle of 1941. Stevens says "Principe will be the best back on the field, and I know we can gain through Army's line."

Rip Miller, the Navy line coach, is the latest to add his accolades to the acclaim for the 1943 Notre Dame team. Miller was one of the seven mules in the line of the ND 1924 team of Four Horseman fame, and he told the New York Football Writers Association the other day that Frank Leahy's team is a better club than any Knute Rockne turned out at South Bend.

"I used to think that 1924 team was tops," said Miller, "and I always rated that unbeaten team of 1930 with Carideo, Savoldi, Schwartz and Brill as Notre Dame's second best, but I've rearranged my ratings. This 1943 team is tops. On the day Notre Dame beat Navy, they could have beaten any club that was ever put together—college or professional."

Coach Leahy revealed that he gave his rookie backs, Johnny Lujack and Bob Kelly, a private lecture before the game with Army. "Don't be afraid of making mistakes," he told them. "You'll make mistakes and you won't be great backs until you do."

Lieut. Comdr. Bill Reinhart, the George Washington U. coach, who is soon to go to sea, called the turn on the Redskins-Philpitts tie game last Sunday when he declared, "Sammy Baugh will have trobule passing against that team. Every team I've ever seen Greasy Neale coach has always known how to rush a passer, and Baugh will need more protection than he ever had." Reinhart, as it turned out, was positively prophetic.

Notre Dame is headed for the national championship, of course. All it has to do these next three weekends, is beat Northwestern, Iowa Pre-Flight and Great Lakes. If the Irish get by those three, after having already beaten Georgia Tech, Michigan, Wisconsin, Army, and Navy, they will have a fair kind of record.

Augie Lio comes back to Griffith Stadium on Sunday, with the Detroit Lions. He was a great lineman at Georgetown, but the pity is that Washington fans didn't see it for themselves, with all of Georgetown's big games scheduled for other cities when Lio was playing. He'll be the guy booting the ball if the Lions need three points at any time against the Redskins.

George Smythe, the flashy-running West Point quarterback of two decades ago, is still gaining ground for the Army. He's now a full colonel, in command of an infantry regiment that barged through Sicily and is now in action in Italy. Colonel Smythe quarterbacked the West Point teams of 1921-22-23 when Ed Garbisch was booting those field goals. In four years at West Point, Smythe was the smallest man on the Army squads and the greatest ground gainer. They're still comparing Army quarterbacks to Smythe.

For years, football referees have been flipping coins and asking the opposing captains to call it before the opening kick-off, for the choice of being the kicking or receiving team. It now developes that down through the years, Referee Bill Halloran has been using a counterfeit coin for the purpose. When the Army and Notre Dame captains went to the center of the field to call "heads" or "tails," Halloran flipped a coin that bore no other marks except an "H" on one side and a "T" on the other. If the winning captain demands it as a souvenir, as he often does, Halloran is not out of pocket.

Former Gridmen Are Better Prepared For Competition, Says Marine Officer

Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman of the U. S. Marines yesterday stoutly defended football as an important sport in wartime in a talk before the weekly luncheon of the Touchdown Club.

The former great coach whose teams made history at Tulane University and the University of Minnesota and whose Iowa Seahawks were outstanding among service teams in 1942, said:

"You will find that men with football experience are better fortified physically and mentally than most of those without it. Their reflexes are better, they are more alert and they are better qualified to stand the wear and tear of competition."

Colonel Bierman further praised football for the competitive spirit it instills in athletes.

He refused to comment on his plans after the war, saying:

"Things are too vague and the job ahead too stupendous to speculate on anything else at this time."

Dr. Clarence W. Spears, director of athletics and football coach at the University of Maryland and scout for the Washington Redskins, will address the club next Tuesday.

Call to Colors

Tom Bridges Stands Exam In Two Weeks

Detroit, Nov. 9 (AP).—Tommy Bridges, long a mainstay of the Detroit Tigers pitching staff, received a call from his draft board today.

BRIDGES

Bridges, who will be 37 next month, is married and the father of an 8-year-old daughter, was reclassified 1-A on October 26. He has been ordered to take his final examination November 20.

The mound star is the last veteran of the championship Tigers of 1935 remaining with the Detroit club. A Tiger since 1930, his entire big-league career, Bridges pitched the deciding game of the 1935 series.

Witek Reports Today

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—Nicholas (Mickey) Witek, regular second baseman of the New York Giants, has been ordered to report at Luzerne, Pa., tomorrow for induction into the Army. Witek, who is married and who previously had been put into class 1-A, has been working in a Newark, N. J., defense plant since the end of the baseball season. The Giants, anticipating Witek's induction, claimed two second basemen, Hugh Luby of Oakland, Calif., and George Hausman of New Orleans, in the major league draft last week.

Pitcher Bithorn 'In'

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Nov. 9 (AP).—Hiram Bithorn, right-handed pitcher who won 17 games for the Chicago Cubs last season, reported yesterday at the induction center at Fort Buchanan for physical and intelligence tests.

While a definite ruling on Bithorn's status is expected tomorrow, an indication of his future came from the officer in charge who said: "I think you're going to pitch for the Army from now on."

Hocket Now 1-A

Dayton, Ohio, Nov. 9 (AP).—Oris Hockett, outfielder for the Cleveland Indians, and a toolmaker at a Dayton factory during the off season, was notified today by his draft board that he has been reclassified in 1-A. He is married and the father of three children.

Garden Slates 16 Basketball Doubleheaders

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—A schedule of 16 basketball double-headers, opening December 14, was announced today for Madison Square Garden.

The inaugural double bill will match City College and the Oklahoma Aggies, opening-night rivals for several years, in one game and Long Island University and Brigham Young in the other. Terps' Hurson To Miss Game

Big Ed Hurson, first-string center for the University of Maryland football team, appeared yesterday to be definitely out of the Bainbridge Naval Training Station game Saturday because of injuries suffered last week against Virginia.

Head Coach Dr. Clarence E. Spears said that Bill Hickman, a fast-breaking back, might also miss the game or see only limited action.

4 Mat Matches Scheduled Friday

Four matches already have been lined up for Friday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena featuring Elvira Snodgrass, the erstwhile Smoke Mountain, Tenn., hillbilly now gone Hollywood, and Rose Evans, the Texas cowgirl.

The latest to be paired off are Dominic Serio, of New York, and Tom George, veteran Greek grappler from St. Louis.

A special added attraction brings together Babe Sharkey, the husky Texas grappler, and The Black Mask, towering hooded grappler, while Maurice LaChappelle, the Flying Frenchman, will tackle Henry Kulkovich, the Mad Russian.

Colts Relying On Bassin for Rider Clash

By Tom Moore McBride

Addie Bassin, the Coolidge Colts' shifty-hipped quarterback, received belated recognition yesterday by the Touchdown Club as the outstanding football player of the week, with a $25 war bond to prove the club's esteem.

All of which goes to show what friendships will do.

Bassin, who has scored most of unbeaten Coolidge's touchdowns so far—and who probably will score most, if any, of those made against Roosevelt in the spot game at Griffith Stadium Thursday night—never played football until this year. He started playing at the instigation of one Irving Morris, an old friend who happens to play quarterback for Roosevelt.

So if Bassin runs wild against the Rough Riders Thursday night, Roosevelt can blame it all on their ace back, Morris.

More Competition

Right at the moment, however, it doesn't look like Addie will have as free-scoring a time as he has had against some of the other teams the Colts have come up against. Despite the fact that Bernie Citrenbaum won't be in as fullback and Ed Mifflin won't be able to make it at half or quarter, Roosevelt will be in there with the usual bruising line that has made it the No. 2 contender so far this year.

And the backfield, Coach Artie Boyd says, isn't weakened appreciably. Besides Morris, a hard-plunging back, there's Louis Limbaugh, who'll be substituting for Mifflin, and who is no slouch. Don Swan also is being shifted to the backfield. John Moore will be in as a blocking back.

Over Coolidge way they've been concentrating on some power plays which should give the Riders trouble, despite the fact that Roosevelt has just about the strongest line in high school competition. Coach Gil Conn believes his line is just as good as that of the Riders, and means to use it in the event the weather is unsuited for the spectacular Shullenbarger to Bassin aerial attack.

No Kicking Worries

With Shullenbarger in there kicking, Conn has no worries on that score, either, for Johnnie has been giving Pearce Godfrey of Wilson a close race for the top kicking performance among the high schools.

That game Thursday night at Griffith Stadium should be a whizdizz, but if Coolidge wins, as it should on the face of the record, Irv Morris won't have anybody but himself to blame when Bassin goes whizzing past him.

Weiss Still Hopes to Shift Service Game

An eleventh-hour plea that the Army-Navy football game be played where 75,000 or so persons can see it was made yesterday by Representative Weiss (Democrat) of Pennsylvania in a letter to Secretary of War Stimson, the Associated Press reported.

The War Department has announced that the game will be played at West Point, November 27, and only persons living within a 10-mile radius will be allowed to attend because of transportation problems.

"I plead with you, Mr. Secretary, to revise your policy and permit this great game to be played in New York, Baltimore or Philadelphia, where it will encounter little or no transportation obstacles, and where we can promote a real job of selling war bonds," Weiss wrote.

"Many members of your military staff and thousands of our American soldiers will unquestionably witness the soccer game between England and Scotland in England, November 21, played before 100,000 people for the benefit of Greek and Russian relief.

"If the British, who are within a half-hour of the real danger of the Luftwaffe, can enjoy a soccer football game, for goodness sake, what has happened to the good old U. S. A.?"

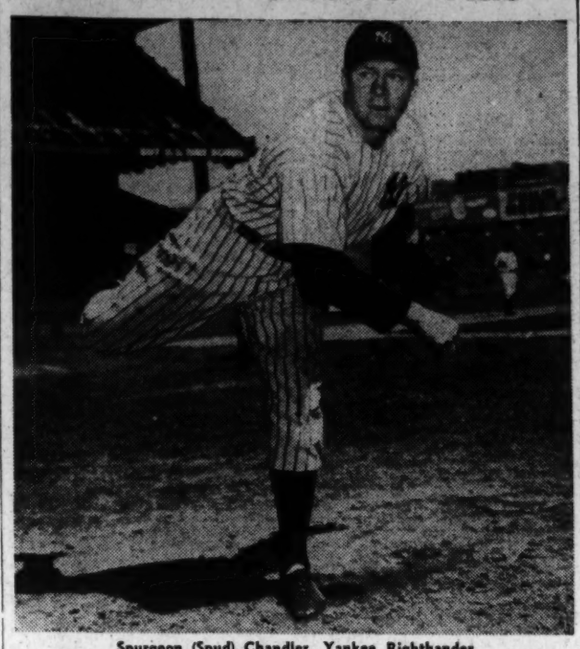
Waco, Tex., Nov. 9 (AP).—Baylor University, which dropped football and did not expect to participate in any other sport this year, will return to intercollegiate athletics with a basketball team, the physical department of the school said today.

Yankees Win Another

Spud Chandler Pitches Self The 'Most Valuable' Title



Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler, Yankee Righthander

Righthander Tops in League; Appling Next; Nats' Case and Johnson Well Up in Balloting

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—Spud Chandler, New York Yankee pitcher whose earned-run average of 1.67 was the lowest in the American League in the last 25 years, was named today as the league's most valuable player for 1943.

The right-hander from Georgia hurled the Yankees to the league pennant with a record of 20 victories against four defeats and followed through in the World Series by beating the St. Louis Cardinals twice in as many starts as the Bronx Bombers regained the world championship.

He received 246 of a possible 336 points in the voting by a committee of the Baseball Writers' Association to lead the league's batting champion, Luke Appling of the Chicago White Sox, by 31 points. Appling, with 215 points, was far ahead of slugging Rudy York of Detroit, home rung king with 34, who placed third with 152 points.

Bob Johnson Gets 116 Points

Rookie Bill Johnson, Yankee third sacker, whose eighth inning triple with the bases full in the third game of the World Series shattered the Cardinals' hopes, was fourth with 136 points. Bob Johnson, veteran Washington outfielder completed the first five with 116 points.

The 34-year-old Chandler, who received 12 of 24 first place votes, had the greatest season of his career. He indicated what was to come in his first start of the year on April 24 by twirling a one-hitter in blanking Washington, 1 to 0. The one hit went to Ellis Clary, the first man up, who banged for a double.

Altogether Spud appeared in 30 games and went the route in 20 of them, winning five of his games by shutouts. He pitched a total of 253 innings, gave up 196 hits, issued only 54 bases on balls and struck out 134. Appropriately he pitched the game that clinched the pennant for the Yanks, beating Detroit, 2 to 1, in a 14-inning struggle on September 25.

Scattered His Losses

His four defeats were widely separated. He lost his first to Cleveland, 5-2, on May 23; his second to Washington, 8-0, on June 23; his third to Cleveland, 6-2, on July 28, and his fourth to Washington, 3-2 in 10 innings, on September 19.

Chandler also was dangerous at bat. He wound up the season with a .258 average, whacking out 25 hits in 97 times at bat, including five doubles and two homers. He drove in seven runs. He fielded his position with finesse, being regarded as a fifth infielder.

In all, 38 players received points in the balloting. The complete list, giving total points and with number of first place votes in parentheses.

Mrs. Weible Rejects Fourth DWGA Term

The nominating committee of the District Women's Golf Association is expected to name Mrs. Frank Mirth of Indian Spring as its choice for 1944 president in a meeting to be held at the home of Chairman Mrs. Edward Wilmayer this morning.

MRS. WEIBLE

Mrs. Walter L. Weible, three-time president of the group who had considered an informal bid to accept a fourth term, asked her name be withdrawn before the nominating committee, composed of a member of each member club, met to announce the 1944 slate.

Mrs. Weible, wife of Brig. Gen. Walter L. Weible, was elected president of the association after serving just one year as handicap chairman after moving here from Kansas City. The Weibles are members of Kenwood Country Club.

The association enjoyed its biggest year in 1941 under Mrs. Weible's regime. The outgoing president installed rules and regulations which closely followed the pattern of the Women's Western G. A. and brought the local group closer to the USGA, the parent body.

Northwestern Will Feature Pass Offense

By Charles Dunkley

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 9 (AP).—Northwestern's Wildcats, back in strong stride after a faltering start, will be at the peak of their power against nonpareil Notre Dame Saturday.

The Purple machine functioned in low gear against Indiana and Michigan, picked up a bit of speed in rolling over Great Lakes and Ohio State, but didn't reach its maximum operating efficiency until it barged through Minnesota and Wisconsin like a thundering tank.

The two latter games—in which the Wildcats ran up 83 points in contrast to the 47 they compiled in four earlier contests—demonstrate that their attack is clicking.

Capacity Crowd Seen

The fact that Notre Dame has indulged in scoring splurges since the season's first kick-off, coupled with the recent show of strength by Northwestern, indicates that a capacity crowd of 48,000 spectators who will jam Dyche Stadium will see a spectacular battle of offenses.

While the Purple squad as a whole has improved, Otto Graham, its standout star, has reached the peak of his career, too. The Waukegan, Ill., wizard will be in there pitching his passing skill against the Irish team's 18-year-old Johnny Lujack and attempting to match the running ability of Creighton Miller, Jim Mello and company.

Graham will be Notre Dame's principal stumbling block in the path to victory. He must assume most of the ball carrying burden following the loss to the services of Fullback Don Buffmire and Halfback Herman Frickey.

Passes May Turn Trick

If the Wildcats are able to crack the defense of the South Bend supermen, it probably will be Graham's passing that will turn the trick. His three-year record already eclipses such famed Western Conference passers as Michigan's Benny Friedman and Harry Newman, and Northwestern's own "Pug" Rentner.

Graham's 1943 record of 25 completions out of 49 attempts gives him a mark of 51 per cent. He revealed that he is at razor-edge perfection when he hit four out of five passes against Wisconsin last Saturday for 72 yards.

Graham's backfield mates Saturday will include Lynne McNutt, quarterback; Nick Vodick, fullback, and Joe Scriba, right half, all juniors.

Halfback Davis Of Army Loses Ground to Math

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—Glenn Davis, star Army halfback, will not play for the Cadets against the Sampson (N. Y.) Naval Training team at West Point this Saturday, it was learned today, because he has become deficient in mathematics.

While the star broken-field runner from Los Angeles, who only a year ago was playing high-school football, will watch this week's game from the sidelines, it is possible that he will become eligible again in time to play against Brown on November 20 and against Navy November 27. Army's eligible list is made up weekly.

District's Bill Dellastatious New Big Six Scoring Leader

Kansas City, Nov. 9 (AP).—Bill Dellastatious, the Washington (D. C.) boy on the Missouri football squad, is the new individual scoring leader of conference games in the Big Six.

Scoring three touchdowns against Iowa State Saturday, the Tiger halfback boosted his point total to 36 for three circuit contests.

Still in top spot by a good margin in the all-games department was Bob Brumley, the Oklahoma veteran, and he ranked second today in conference play. Posting a touchdown and two extra points against Kansas Saturday, Brumley now has 57 points in seven games this season. His conference total is 26.

Dellastatious is second to Brumley for the season's play with his 36 points while another Missourian, Don (Bull) Reece, is running in third place in both contests. The Tiger 240-pound fullback has 30 points in six games and 24 in three conference affairs.

Cleo Shans Matched

Philadelphia, Nov. 9 (AP).—Cleo Shans of Los Angeles and Ellis Phillips, Philadelphia lightweight, will meet here in a 10-round bout November 22, Promoter Herman Taylor announced today.

Bill Hewitt, Steagle End, Quits Gridiron

Philadelphia, Nov. 9 (AP).—Bill Hewitt, 35-year-old left end of the Philadelphia-Pittsburgh Steagles of the National Football League, retired from professional football today, several weeks after he started a comeback following three seasons of inactivity.

Bert Bell, president of the Pittsburgh Steelers, which owns him, said he offered no explanation but that "I presume he felt he could not do justice to his war job and still play with us."

Hewitt is priorities chief in a Philadelphia machine shop. Bell described him as "one of the best and finest players I have ever known," and said his playing, in all six of the Steagles' league games so far this season, has been "entirely satisfactory."

Hewitt began his professional career in 1932 with the Chicago Bears and joined the Philadelphia Eagles after five seasons there. He played with the Eagles three seasons before his previous retirement.

Four World's Rifle Records Broken by Quantico Marines

Quantico, Va., Nov. 9.—Four new world's records were written into the books by Marine Corps officers during firing on the pistol range here yesterday. The match was a registered National Rifle Association tournament.

Maj. E. O. Swanson, USMCR, formerly of Minneapolis, scored 189 out of a possible 200, to break the world's record in the 20-shot slow-fire match, .22 caliber.

In the timed fire match, Warrant Officer C. A. Brown, USMCR, of Tampa, Fla., made a perfect score of 200 out of 200, .22 caliber. He also established a new record for the short national match course in scoring 296 out of 300, .22 caliber. The previous record was 295.

A four-man team established the other new mark, scoring 1127 out of a possible 1200 in slow, timed, and rapid fire, .45 caliber. The team members were Capt. Albert Shapiro, USMCR, formerly of Detroit; Lieut. T. E. Barrier, USMC, Statesville, N. C.; Major Swanson, and Warrant Officer Brown.

Navy Pointing for Real Battle With Lions

Annapolis, Nov. 9 (AP).—With expectations of a real struggle against Columbia University Saturday, Navy's football team went through blocking and tackling practice today and reviewed the movies of the Penn-Navy game of last weekend.

When asked if Columbia would be a "walk-over" for the victory marching Middies, one of the Navy coaches declared "it will be far from a walk-over. Lou Little can always be counted upon for surprises and the Lions, despite their record this season, have been extremely strong first-half competitors this year.

"We will have a real battle on our hands in subduing the Columbia boys and Coach Little," this coach continued.

However, despite the expressions of anxiety about the outcome of the Saturday fray with the Lions in New York, the Midshipmen themselves had only one team in mind as they went through their drills. That was Army on November 27.

Coach John E. Whelchel stated he put little faith in the current run of predictions that Navy will be the favorite when the Tars enter the West Point Stadium.

"The game will be a toss-up from start to finish," he said.

Navy has met Columbia in 12 games in a series between the two institutions which began in 1900 and Columbia has won six of them while Navy has won five. One game—that in 1940—ended in a scoreless tie.

Last season the Middies downed the aerial attack of Paul Governali of the Lions, 13-9, in Baltimore Stadium on a last minute pass play involving two of this year's squad—Hal Hamberg and Hillis Hume.

While the Middies meet Columbia, Army will challenge the Sampson Naval Training Station eleven and the following week, Navy takes a well-deserved rest while the Cadets tackle Brown University.

Then on November 27, the annual service classic, to be held under presidential proclamation at West Point, will take place and the mythical championship of the East will probably depend on the result.

Director J. E. Captures Oden Bowie Stakes

Arcaro Drives Bryson Colt in By 5 Lengths

By Walter Haight

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 9.—Director J. E., named for J. Edgar (FBI) Hoover, ran like a fugitive from justice here this afternoon to win the $5000 added Oden Bowie Stakes, a fixture here since 1937 as the Sagamore Stakes. The fleet 2-year-old son of Sickle and Dead Reckoning, under the handling of Jockey Eddie Arcaro, finished 5 lengths ahead of the Mill River Stable's Sweeping Time and 11 lengths in advance of the Calumet Farm's Pensive in a field of five going 6 furlongs.

The crowd of 12,000 installed Longchamps Farms' Dance Team, a winner over Director J. E. when last they met, as the favorite, but the Cohort gelding failed to last and finished in the rear. Director J. E. racing in the Maryland colors of Mrs. Ella K. Bryson, returned a $12.90 mutuel. The track was drying and had reached the slow stage for the race. The winner registered time of 1:14.

Dance Team broke on top, but Director J. E. had things under control in the opening furlong and the farther they went the farther he drew out. Civil Liberty attempted to race with the leader and weakened. Sweeping Time and Pensive made late moves, but succeeded only in passing tired horses.

Another for Arcaro

The War Cloud Purse, the day's secondary feature, proved an easy triumph for Max Marmorstein's Chaldon Heath. The 5-year-old son of Challenger II and Phenomenon also was ridden by Arcaro and jogged home 3½ lengths in front of Christiana Stables' Quillon with J. R. Stanmyer's Homeward Bound in third position in a starting field of seven. Chaldon Heath paid $6.20 as second choice to a dull-running Calumet Farm entry of Nellie L. and Yukon. The winner was clocked in 1:45 4-5 for the mile and 70 yards.

It took the stewards eight minutes to disqualify Danerski from third money in today's steeplechase. . . . During that period the crowd was uninformed, but it was plain to those watching closely that the jumper had gone off the course. . . . Holders of tickets on Polly Macdun, finally placed third, deserved a better break. . . . Some of them probably are still looking for pieces of torn-up tickets. . . . Teddy Atkinson, who has been riding in sansational form in New York, will be seen here Thursday aboard Preston Burch's True North in the Ritchie Handicap. Trainer Sarge Swenke says Alsab is as good now as he ever was in his career. . . . The son of Good Goods goes in the Bryan and O'Hara Memorial Handicap on Saturday and will be hard to beat. . . . John M. Gaver, in charge of the Greentree Stable horses, was reelected president of the American Trainers Association at a meeting here yesterday. . . . Lucky Draw, whipped by Royal Prince here last week, worked excellently on the off track this morning and will start in the Walden. . . . Jockey George Woolf, suffering from a cold, canceled his mounts for the afternoon. . . . Jockey W. Owen was cut about the head when his mount fell in the steeplechase.

Some Soldiers Face Indefinite Pacific Duty, Rep. Rogers Told

By the Associated Press

Soldiers sent to the Southwest and South Pacific probably face a tour of duty of indefinite duration in those areas, the War Department has advised Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican) of Massachusetts.

However, sailors are likely to be given home leaves after 18 months of "hazardous duty afloat or in outlying stations," Navy Secretary Knox told the Massachusetts Congresswoman, who in turn placed the information in the Congressional Record.

Mrs. Rogers wrote Secretary of War Stimson and Knox stating that eight mothers from Winchester, Mass., had asked that their sons be granted furloughs to return home from the South Pacific where they had been stationed the past 21 months.

Blames Shipping

John W. Martyn, administrative assistant in the War Department, replied that while the matter of providing a definite time limit for service overseas has been studied continuously since Pearl Harbor, there is one insurmountable obstacle—"insufficient shipping facilities."

"The present War Department policy places upon the overseas commander concerned the determination as to when an individual should be returned to the United States," Martyn said.

"Primary emphasis is placed upon rotating personnel from station to station within the theater in order to provide relief for those on duty at remote and small stations, as well as for those serving under severe climatic conditions.

"Shipping conditions in the Southwest Pacific area are such that there will probbaly be no return of units to the United States under the rotation policy for an indefinite period." He added that the same situation applied in the South Pacific area.

Knox Replies

Knox wrote that the Navy Department has announced its policy of rotating enlisted personnel for rehabilitation leave and reclassification after a minimum period of service of 18 months in hazardous sea duty or in outlying stations, but noted:

"This is promulgated as a matter of policy and not of directive, since the granting of leave or rotation must be consistent with the maintenance of the fighting efficiency of the service. . . . The granting of leave remains the prerogative of the commanding officer."

Nazis in Spain Expect Simultaneous Blows

Madrid, Nov. 9 (AP).—Germans in Spain expect the next Allied moves to be launched simultaneously on several fronts, a Madrid source said last night.

The Nazis are said to believe the Allies have sufficient manpower and equipment available to make attacks at several points at the same time.

Gen. Wedemeyer Wins DSM for Strategic Plans

Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, whose wife lives at 2800 Woodley rd. nw., has won the Distinguished Service Medal for his outstanding ability, resourcefulness, tact, initiative and strategy in his position as deputy chief of the Southeastern Asia Command, the War Department announced Monday.

"He contributed in large measure to the adoption by the United States and by the United Nations of sound strategical plans which have formed the basis for the successful prosecution of the war on all fronts," the citation said.

General Wedemeyer, according to the citation, was in a position of great responsibility as "chief of the strategy section and chief of the strategy and policy group, operations division, War Department general staff and as the War Department representative with joint and combined staff planners."

Jury Convicts U. S. Translator of Aiding Nazis

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—Roberto Lanas Vallecilla, 35, former translator in the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, was convicted today in Federal Court on charges of conspiring to sell American defense secrets to German agents in 1940 and 1941 and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

The jury retired after Federal Judge Murray Hulbert instructed that the real issue to determine was whether Lanas transmitted the information to the Nazis "with the intent and reason to believe that the information was to be used to the advantage of the German government or against the interests of the United States of America."

Lanas, a native of Colombia, admitted writing messages on American military machine production in invisible ink on an apparently innocent lettter and mailing it to a "drop" in Lisbon. He said, however, he obtained the information from public reports and was interested only in obtaining money from Germany.

In summing up the Government's case, United States Attorney James B. M. McNally called Lanas "international scum" and said he had expressed admiration for Germany and the Nazi system.

"It makes a fellow think twice"

"Most of us have been seeing war pictures of a different kind lately. Realistic pictures . . . cruel . . . sickening—the sort to make any American fighting mad.

"There's even a chance that a fallen soldier, wounded sailor or captured flyer we look at may be someone we know. And that possibility is going to grow every day the war continues.

"Another thing about these pictures is bringing the Volturno and Vella Lavella a lot closer. They show American battle equipment—the weapons that are out at the front today because we all teamed up to produce and send them.

"Here at Broderick & Bascom we take special pains to spot the wire rope that's vital to scores of land, sea and air operations. Viewing it on landing barges and aircraft carriers, on tanks, repair trucks and bridges, we realize that our jobs as well as our War Bond dollars are working to win and shorten the war.

"Once that fact sinks in, it makes a fellow think twice when tempted to take a day off.

"More likely than not, you can page through today's papers and come face to face with late war pictures of the kind we've been talking about. Study them. See if they don't freshen your responsibility to those in the services. See if they don't sharpen up the contribution you are making to war production, directly or indirectly.

"In short, see if they don't urge you, as they urge us, to stay on the job and make every minute count."

Federal Employes Join In High Wage Clamor

Federal employes will join the clamor for higher wages. The stretching of the Little Steel formula for John Lewis' miners, which is being followed by an avalanche of wage-increase demands, has set off a new drive to boost the salaries of Federal workers. Each of the three "white collar" Federal employe unions that has headquarters here went to work this week with renewed vigor to line up support for an upward adjustment of Government salaries following the miners' breakthrough on the antiinflation line that was to have been held. The three unions are in agreement that employe wages should be boosted, but they're in general dispute over how it should be done.

KLUTTZ

The unions are united on this one point; that Federal employes should be given full overtime pay of time and a half as Uncle Sam requires of industry through the Wage and Hour Act. The way the Government now computes overtime pay for his white-collar workers amounts to little more than straight time. For example, a private employe or an industrial worker in Government is paid 30 per cent additional for eight hours of overtime, but the white-collar employe is paid only 21.6 per cent additional for the same time. The unions are demanding that the Government's white-collar employes be treated like everyone else.

National Federation of Federal Employes, an independent union, is working on two plans to raise salaries in addition to full overtime. First, it has in mind a scaling upward of classification rates, and second, is a percentage increase for everyone. The union's executive board went on record here recently for higher salaries and it left the mechanics up to the national officers. The American Federation of Government Employes, affiliated with the AFL, wants the Little Steel formula applied to Government and a flat 15 per cent increase on basic salaries given to Federal workers. This demand has the indorsement of the mother union.

United Federal Workers of America, a CIO affiliate, has its wage increase demands incorporated in a bill that's being sponsored by Representative Scanlon of Pennsylvania, and a companion bill soon will be introduced in the Senate by a powerful figure. The bill would authorize the President to set up a little war labor board for Federal workers to handle their wage problems. If the wage board idea, the union says, is good enough for industry, it should be good enough for Government. Moreover, the union, backed by the CIO, is all out for cracking the Little Steel formula.

It isn't generally realized among employes here, but the salaries of hundreds of thousands of Federal workers is fixed by wage boards—mainly in the Army and Navy—and these employes also are ready to demand increases. In fact, salaries of the great bulk of these employes will be raised automatically without any action whatever by Congress if the Little Steel formula is replaced by another wage line. But Congress must act to jump wages in the CAF service. Charman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee is dead set against any immediate increase, but Civil Service leaders in the Senate are reported to look upon the proposal in a much more favorable light. In any event, the drive is on and it'll be accelerated should the Government continue to puncture its own inflation line and hand out raises to private employes.

Frank Hancock, the new chief of Farm Security, supported FSA legislation and appropriations when he was a member of the House. But he'll find many of the old FSA gang have left their posts when he takes over the job on November 15. Beany Baldwin, former administrator, already has taken Adele Ford, administrative assistant, and George Mitchell, deputy administrator, with him to his State Department job, and now it's reported that Jim Heizer, chief of the management division, also will join his former boss. Jim Maddox and Carl Gibbony have joined Foreign Economic, and Raub Snyder is expected to join the Farmers Union. Meantime, the House Agriculture Committee is speeding up its plans to merge FSA with Farm Credit. FCA Governor Black is now out in the open in favor of consolidation.

INFLATION NOTE: A 17-year-old boy was given a $95-a-month messenger job in a private Washington concern. As he was making the rounds on his first day at work he was offered a clerk's job in another office within the same company at $125. The boy was debating the offer when his boss jumped his salary to $160. Oh, what a wonderful day . . . Dayton R. Ludwig, jr Army transportation specialist, has devised a new way of loading guns on flat railroad cars which will save Uncle Sam more than a million dollars in freight rates. He was given a $250 cash award by the War Department . . . Federal Bureau of Investigation is scouting for clerk talent among District and nearby high schools.

D. C. Refuses To Handle Golf Courses

The District Recreation Board yesterday turned down the proposal of the Interior Department under which the board would have operated Washington's six public golf courses, phrasing its rejection as follows:

"The board does not deem it advisable to assume the responsibility of operating golf courses at this time."

An earlier resolution offered by Chairman Harry S. Wender on behalf of the contracts and leases committee, reading "it is recommended the Secretary of the Interior be notified the board is unable to accept agreement on the terms submitted to us," did not come up for vote.

Wender Gives Reason

Mrs. Alice Hunter, board secretary, proposed the substitute resolution, she said, to avoid "creation of the impression that the board was carrying on a quarrel with the Interior Department."

Under the proposed agreement, the Interior Department requested that "the board shall operate the golf courses and related facilities in accordance with rules and regulations approved by the Secretary or his authorized representative."

Wender offered a two-fold reason for the board's refusal to take over the golf courses. He said that first, all of the equipment of the golf courses was owned by the S. G. Loeffler Operating Co., present concessionnaire, and that even if Loeffler were willing to sell the equipment the board had no money with which to purchase it.

He said the resolution also was based on the Interior Department's insistence that the board not be permitted to set up any policies for operation or management without first securing approval of the Federal agency.

Fund Transferred

At the same meeting the board voted to transfer an additional $5500 to the National Capital Parks, as a supplement to a previously transferred $14,500, for the construction of four shelter houses of modern design in the Randall, Congress Heights, Sherwood, and Edgewood playgrounds. Each structure will cost approximately $5000, it was said.

Joseph Cole, Negro, acting director of the city-wide section of the recreation board, read a report which recommended that additional bowling alleys, football, baseball and softball fields, swimming pools and other recreational facilities, be supplied in the Northeast, Southwest and Southeast sections of the District.

In Divorce Trial

Blood Fails As Proof Of Paternity

By Joseph Paull

Despite two blood tests to the contrary, Justice Jennings Bailey of District Court declared yesterday that the husband of Mrs. Ruby L. Wenger, 20, of 2904 Nash pl. se., is the father of her 5-month-old son.

Although it is generally believed among laymen that blood tests are conclusive proof of paternity, before this case there was no local ruling to guide the courts in settling paternity cases.

Justice Bailey establised a local precedent for the weight to be given to blood tests in cases of this sort. He agreed with decisions in other jurisdictions which held that testimony from doctors on blood tests was to be given no more weight than that given to other expert testimony.

He said the blood tests did not overcome the strong presumption of legitimacy which attaches to wedlock when there is no definite evidence of an extra-marital lover, and no suspicious circumstances.

Dr. Oscar Hunter, a leading local physician, testified in behalf of the husband, Nelson E. Wenger, 26, a Navy Department clerk, that blood tests definitely eliminated him as the father. Dr. Hunter said both Mr. and Mrs. Wenger had type "O" blood, and since the child has type "A" it was illegitimate.

Attorney Richard Galiher, representing Mrs. Wenger, stipulated that Dr. Philip Levine of Newark, one of the country's leading blood pathologists, had concurred with Hunter.

Justice Bailey dismissed a divorce suit filed by Wenger based on the grounds of adultery. He also dismissed Mrs. Wenger's counter-suit charging cruelty.

Grand Jury to Quiz 12 Witnesses in Gallinger Inquiry

Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly announced yesterday that 12 persons will be called today to testify before the grand jury investigating alleged criminal irregularities in the administration of Gallinger Hospital.

The inquiry resulted from a Senate District subcommittee report advising a change of administration. At present the grand jury is studying possible mishandling of hospital funds. Later it will sift evidence of attack on patients.

Nine of the witnesses today are Gallinger employes: Frank R. Hester, Arthur Jordan, Pierce H. Hiaffer, Lacell Tucker, Waldo A. Kuhn, Battle Winston, James Ford, George E. Gray and Arthur E. Files.

INAUGURATION AT CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY—At the left, the newly inaugurated rector, the Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, makes his inaugural speech. Picture at right shows the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, D. D., Apostolic Delegate, who read the Decree of Appointment, and the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington and Chancellor of Catholic University, who delivered the principal address

Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick was installed formally as rector of Catholic University of America yesterday afternoon. He has been associated with the institution since 1910.

Monsignor McCormick's appointment as rector was the first to be made of an alumnus in the 54-year history of the university, and marked the seventh rectorship of the institution.

As strains of the processional, played by the 2517th Service Unit military band, sounded, a line of marchers, led by the student body and including provincials of religious orders, members of the Catholic hierachy and delegates from a dozen learned societies, moved slowly into the large gymnasium where the ceremonies were held.

After invocation by the Most Rev. John J. Glennon, Archbishop of St. Louis, the decree of appointment was read Monsignor McCormick by the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to America.

In his inaugural address Monsignor McCormick declared that a vital function of democracy was education for leadership, "that type of leadership demanded in a democracy, leadership in thought and action.

"If the war has been fought for preservation of democratic ideals," he went on, "and if blueprints of peace shall be drawn to guarantee their continuance, then the vital functions of a university in a democratic society will have increasing significance."

He warned: "To beware of sedition, and of seditious persons, wherever found. To hold inviolate the rights of everyone else, and to show willingly due deference to employers and to do honest work, to not get a distaste for the life of the home, which is in many ways so fruitful in good," and, last, "to attend especially to religion, and to seek in it sure consolation amid the hardships of life."

Monsignor McCormick held that a program of five specific points he followed. These were:

(1) Teaching of loyalty to constituted authority, (2) teaching justice that people may not offend the rights of others, whether rich or poor, (3) instructing the masses to respect employers and give an honest return in labor, (4) protecting the home and family, the basis of democratic society, and (5) championing religion.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington and chancellor of the university, introduced Monsignor McCormick.

Oldest cleric at the university in point of service, Monsignor McCormick came to the institution in 1910 from Hartford, Conn., where he had been diocesan superintendent of schools.

He received the degree of bachelor of theology in 1905 and became a licentiate in theology of the university in 1906. From 1910 to 1914 he was an instructor in education, later becoming associate professor of education and department head.

He has been vice rector of the university since May, 1936. He was ordained July 26, 1904, after completing studies at St. Joseph's Seminary, Dunwoodie, N. Y. He was born in Norwich, Conn., December 19, 1880.

$50,000 Additional Damage Counted in Md. Tornado Area

Further reports of the damage by the tornado that narrowly missed Washington Monday night were disclosed last night from nearby Maryland points, coincidental with predictions by the Weather Bureau that colder temperatures would prevail today following yesterday's deluge that blocked streets and tied up traffic.

Rural home owners reported additional damages of approximately $50,000 as authorities continued to check the results of the storm.

The twister that apparently originated in the southern end of Prince Georges County, wandered northwesterly, spasmodically touching the ground and creating considerable damage before it broke up outside the thickly populated suburbs north of Washington.

Dwellings Destroyed

It touched several times near the Mayhew rd and destroyed four unoccupied dwellings on land adjoining the airfield.

On one farm, recently taken over by the Government, it picked up a large barn and crashed it down on an 8-room house, destroying both buildings. Later it flattened a 12-room house belonging to J. H. Shiflette which he and his family had vacated only Friday. He valued it at $2000. Furnishings valued at $2000 were destroyed. A house owned by H. L. Dull of the B. & M. Sand and Gravel Co. was leveled, but small outbuildings and farm houses were left untouched.

Suffers Worst Damage

Worst damage was suffered by Norman H. Collins, clerk of the Prince Georges County Police Commissioners, whose large garage and gas station on the Marlboro pike at Forestville was wrecked. Collins said he was sitting in his living room shortly before 9 p. m. when he "heard a noise like a hundred airplanes flying low." The blast took off both sections of the building, throwing them into a field a hundred yards away. The cement-block repair shop, valued at $5000, was completely destroyed and 500-pound chunks of concerete were thrown on top of the main building after the roof had blown off. Other chunks of cement smashed an auto nearby belonging to the county health department and containing medical supplies.

Collins' home, only 50 feet from the gas station, was virtually untouched by the twister, only a few shingles having been blown from the roof and front of the house.

High winds that accompanied the tornado did considerable damage to houses in the Forestville section, ripped the porch off a home belonging to Leroy Pumphrey and twisting from its foundations a house belonging to Mrs. Ruth Padgett of Forestville rd.

Cancellation Of Charwoman Claim Voted

The Senate yesterday passed a bill canceling all Government claims on the salaries of 80 part-time charwomen employed by the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, which last summer notified them that they had been overpaid erroneously at 78 cents per hour instead of the authorized 65.

A similar bill already has been reported favorably by the House Claims Committee but has not yet been voted upon by the lower body.

The Senate vote followed a report by Chairman Robertson of the Senate Claims Committee, in which he said:

"The committee recommend that the bill do pass i.sofar as it provides for the remission of all claims in consequence of payments of wages as set forth in the bill, but do not recommend that the Treasury be authorized to make refunds of any and all amounts heretofore withheld or deducted from wages paid to any of said part-time charwomen for work performed after June 30, 1943, in satisfaction of any and all claims in consequence of said payments of wages at the rate of 78 cents and at the overtime rate. Therefore, your committee have amended the bill accordingly and recommend that it do pass as amended."

First Lady Praises War Nurses' Work

The efficiency of American nurses has been a large factor in the "remarkably high recovery rate of war casualties," Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said last night at the 40th annual meeting of the Graduate Nurses' Association and the District League of Nursing Education in the Departmental Auditorium.

"During my recent visit to the South Pacific, I saw nurses who were homesick and tired but not one of them would think of giving up until the war is over," she said. This attitude is reflected, she added, in the fact that one hospital in New Zealand with 23,000 war casualties had lost only 18 cases.

Mrs. Roosevelt cautioned that women must not expect men to return from war with the same attitudes as before they left, because years of tension and killing will change their values and interests. She reminded that a period of adjustment must follow their return, and said that nurses who have been with men during the war will understand this more than most women.

A joint luncheon of the District Red Cross Nursing Committee, the Graduate Nurses Association and the League of Nursing Education was held yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel. Speakers included Col. F. C. Blanchfield of the Army Nurses Corps, Capt. Sue Dauser of the Navy Nurse Corps, and Mary Beard, director of the Red Cross Nursing Service.

Fall Fatal to Woman

Mayor Will Talk Today

Baltimore's mayor, T. R. McKeldin, will speak at the Rotary Club luncheon at the Willard Hotel today.

Garage Deal Economy Questioned

By Anne Hagner

The economy of storing and servicing 280 Government automobiles at $32.75 each a month in the Capital Garage, which housed cars for $15 monthly until it was leased by the Federal Works Administration, was questioned yesterday by a Senate judiciary subcommittee.

Meeting for consideration of a bill introduced by Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia to set up a Government car pool and penalize private use of Federal vehicles, the subcommittee heard FWA Executive Officer Ernest Hall declare that the agency may not continue handling the New York ave. garage unless the cost per car can be reduced.

Senator Murdock (Democrat) of Utah, chairman of the subcommittee, asserted flatly to Hall that "I doubt if you have any business operating the garage at all."

Hall emphasized repeatedly that he felt sure the garage will grow more valuable to the Government on a mileage and upkeep basis as the various departments become more thoroughly acquainted with its facilities.

"I'm wondering if you are going to request salesmen to sell the project to the departments," said Senator McFarland (Democrat) of Arizona.

Hall pointed out that any new development is costly at the start, and declared that the cost of storage will be approximately $12 a month when the capacity of present storing space—521 cars—is used.

He stated that Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, FWA administrator, has been cooperating with the Bureau of the Budget on legislation for submission to Congress covering a central car-servicing program, but stressed that FWA does not want to take over ownership of all Government-owned automobiles.

"Then you are opposed to a pool?" Murdock asked.

"Yes sir," answered Hall promptly.

Meanwhile Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, who last week requested from General Fleming complete information concerning Capital Garage, yesterday addressed a letter to Harold Smith, director of the Budget Bureau, declaring that he was "not fully satisfied" with the general's figures.

"While I do not wish to be too critical regarding any operation pertaining to the war effort," the West Virginia Congressman said, "I am not fully satisfied with the reasons and figures supplied by General Fleming, since they do not go into the fundamental question as to whether the leasing of the building was essential or economical.

"Do the figures include the entire cost of all persons assigned to the building for operation and service? Is it posible that the cars stored there might just as conveniently and economically be housed elsewhere? I have an interest . . . since there seems to be some suggestion that efforts are being made to fill the building with Government cars to justify its operation. This may not be the true situation; for this reason, I would appreciate your advice."

Policemen Warned On Idle Chatter

Police officers were directed yesterday by Inspector Harvey Callahan, assistant superintendent, not to engage in idle conversation with citizens while on duty.

Members of the force were reminded of the section in the manual which states: "When on patrol duty they (policemen) must not walk or talk with citizens or with each other when they meet on the confines of their beats, unless it is for the purpose of communicating or receiving information pertaining to the police deparament, and then they shall be as brief as possible," Inspector Callahan warned that violations of the order will subject offenders to disciplinary action.

Appeals Court Decides 157 Cases in Year

William E. Richardson, chief judge of the Municipal Court of Appeals, told 250 members of the District Bar Association last night that in its first year of operation, his court has disposed of 157 appeal cases with an average of seven months elapsing between filing of cases in Municipal Court and final disposition in the higher tribunals.

At the monthly meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, Judge Richardson urged continued cooperation by the local bar so that cases may be disposed of as speedily as possible. He said that out of 218 motions filed in the court, 130 were for extension of time by attorneys.

Judge Richardson said the court affirmed two-thirds of the cases decided, reversing the other third. He called this a "good batting average." Only 37 cases have had application for review by the United States Court of Appeals, he said, and "very few" have been granted review.

The other judges of his court, also guests of honor at the meeting, were Andrew Hood and Nathan Cayton.

In a short address, George P. Barse, chief judge of the Municipal Court, said that in the last year, his court has disposed of 11,000 cases a month. Revenues of the court were more than one million dollars, or four times the cost of operation.

"The District of Columbia government is making money off us," said Judge Barse, adding that despite this, the court apparently had as much difficulty as less profitable agencies in obtaining equipment.

Guadalcanal Flag to Fly Here On Marines' 168th Anniversary

The 168th anniversary of the founding of the United States Marine Corps will be celebrated at 11:30 a. m. today with the raising over the Capitol of the flag that Marines planted on Guadalcanal when they recaptured Henderson Field.

Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Marine Corps commandant, will speak at the ceremony on the accomplishments of the Marines in past and present wars. Other speakers will include Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, and Representative Carl Vinson of Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

Lieut. Gen. Holcomb will also speak at 10 a. m. at Marine Corps Headquarters in the Navy Annex at Arlington. A Marine Corps birthday proclamation will be read by Brigadier Gen. L. W. T. Waller, jr.

Major Ruth C. Streeter, director of the Marine Corps Women's Reserve, will swear in the "Potomac Platoon" of women Marines on the steps of the Library of Congress after the ceremony at the Capitol. All members of the platoon were recruited in the District.

First Lieut. James F. McClanahan, USMC, of Baltimore, who won the silver star on Guadalcanal and is now stationed in Washington will supervise the color detail atop the Capitol that will raise the flag. His citation tells that he refused to be evacuated during an engagement in spite of severe wounds and how he skillfully directed the fire of his men so that the enemy was dispersed.

All streetcars of the Capital Transit Co. will fly American flags during the day in honor of the anniversary. Salutes will be given to the Marines over radio programs. Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox is scheduled to speak at 10:30 p. m. today over Station WMAL.

Marines at Quantico will assemble in the Post Theater at 5 p. m. for a birthday party that will include entertainment by the post band and quartet. The preview showing of "Guadalcanal Diary" is also scheduled for the party. The Officers Mess at Washington's Marine Barracks will be host to all Marine officers and their families in this area at a reception from 5 to 7 p. m.

Children's Furniture Finding Place in Adult Room Furnishing

A little slant-top maple desk and chair are charming beside the tile-faced fireplace in this comfortable living room, furnished mostly with early American pieces and in tawny colorings—beige, browns, with flashes of orange and green.

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

During the years of plenty, children have been relegated to swank nurseries and fancy playrooms—at least by the style-making decorators who planned the exhibition roms. You might think, to look at the formal rooms on display in peacetime shows, that children weren't allowed in the main parts of the houses.

Now though, with fuel shortages and the necessity of doubling up the utility of the warm rooms in the house, even the high style decorators are recognizing the young fry and giving them elbow room in the best rooms. And doing it with charm and distinction, too—including the children without sacrificing the poise and dignity of the decorations either.

Many Miniature Models

One way they've done this is to ferret out any number of beautiful pieces of antique children's furniture, and include them in the furnishings of grown-up rooms so that these little pieces are both useful and decorative. Besides, there is a lot of small furniture that can't be called antique and yet with a refinishing would look well in other rooms besides the nursery.

Then too the stores, in the past few years, have had ever so many miniature models of formal chairs, especially in the art needlework departments with needlepoint seats to match that for a grown-up chair. Many of these are still around and make charming small pieces to feature.

As Accent Pieces

A child's slant top desk and chair in maple is a charming little group beside the fireplace in a spacious living room we saw recently. The other furniture was maple and pine and the colors in beige green and orange. While a child's-size Hitchcock rocker was a delightful accent for a bedroom with mahogany furniture, a poster bed and a color scheme of mauve, robin's egg blue and lemon yellow.

A dining room in this same exhibition had maple and pine furniture of early American ancestry, dark green walls, a figured Brussels carpet, red and green plaid gingham curtains and chair seats with as a grace note, an old high chair pulled up to the round table. A living-dining room combination with sedate eighteenth century English mahogany furniture made way for the children with a small Sheraton child's arm chair and a beautiful old spool type of doll bed.

In one of the friendliest and most comfortable living rooms we know about, there is a child's-size roll-top desk alongside of a big one of the same type belonging to father. Both are of oak, with the old varnish taken off and a pleasant pickled finish, so that they look really nice in a room with pine paneled walls, yellow curtains, a beige rug, slip covers in a figured material with terra cotta and green predominating.

Old Cradles

But the cradles are perhaps the most delightful children's pieces for grown-up rooms. We saw one sweet old spindle type mahogany cradle in one of the prettiest bedrooms shown in a long time—with the same rose patterned chintz used for walls, spreads and chairs. While in another new room we saw one of those rocker benches with one end fixed with a cradle board so mother can rock the baby while she sits at the other end of the bench and sews or knits. This was drawn up to a Franklin stove in a plain, comfortable room furnished in shades of dull red and soft old green with pine and maple furniture.

Oftimes a small piece of furniture does double duty for grown-up use too—children's tables of maple are useful for coffee tables or end tables. And little chests of drawers are sometimes nice to use for bedside tables or end tables. Even a little girl's doll dresser, if it's a nice piece of cabinet work, can be used on a dressing table as a mirror with the little drawers for jewels or cosmetics.

Women Have Lead Role in U. S. Morale

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

WAR ALWAYS brings out a strain of melodrama in people's thinking and I am inclined to believe there are real reasons behind this. There is a tendency for the only kid left in the block, because the others have been called to the colors, to be spoiled.

He is inclined to think he is quite a one with the ladies and act as he would never act in normal times—in short, like a dime-novel villain. And there is a tendency for the girl who is one of the 20 girls in the block who hasn't got a fellow just at present to fall for his advances.

So I am addressing this to the ladies as a morale booster and suggest that they have just as much a duty to keep themselves wholesome and healthy as the boys at the front.

I have one or two particular instances in mind, of course, or I wouldn't be in such a super-moral mood.

First I have had an opportunity of being out with a bunch of soldiers from a nearby camp. Of course, there may be other instances and maybe I just got in with the right crowd. But under some provocation to do otherwise I never saw a better behaved bunch of boys in my life.

By a sort of mutual agreement they all went home early. One of them said to me, "We have to keep ourselves in good shape because nobody knows how soon or how long we will have to be members of the most superb army in the world and the one that polices the world."

The other instance is not so pleasant and I by no means believe that it is typical. She is a girl I have known a long time, married to a boy I have known a long time. They have one child. As soon as he was ordered away I would go over to see how she was getting along, but I seldom found her at home. When I did talk to her there was something about her attitude I didn't like. She had become a chain cigarette smoker. She looked sallow and she acted flip. Then I began to hear about her—she was around the night spots. She knew the guys who had plenty of gasoline. Finally she managed to make the headlines in a particularly nasty night club brawl.

Now, it is my old-fashioned opinion that the women of the Nation whether they are in uniform or not should take just as good care of their health and take just as regular exercise as the man in barracks.

Mrs. Delles to Be Honored At American Legion Events

Mrs. Margaret Delles, the new chapeau nationale of the Eight and Forty, honor society of the American Legion Auxiliary, will be a guest of honor at the Armistice Eve dinner dance to be held jointly by the Forty and Eight and American Legion of this department at the Mayflower Hotel today.

MRS. DELLES

Mrs. Delles will place a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington on Armistice Day in the name of the Eight and Forty, and she will also be a guest of the American Legion at Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria. Mrs. Mary Corwin, l'aumonier national; Mrs. Helen Ware, chapeau departemental, and other officers of the salon will accompany Mrs. Delles to Arlington.

A member of the American Legion Auxiliary since 1921, when it was organized, Mrs. Delles has given 23 years of active service to both the legion and auxiliary, particularly in child welfare work. She is eligible through the services in the First World War of two brothers and her husband. She has two sons in the service, one in Italy and the other is teaching mathematics to preflight cadets at the University of Iowa.

Eight and Forty made an appropriation of $2000 to endow two beds in the National Jewish Hospital in Denver, completing endowments for a ward of 25 beds over a period of about 12 years. Prevention of tuberculosis in children is the primary objective of this organization. Appropriations were also made toward the Tuscon (Ariz.) Health Center, St. Petersburg (Fla.) Home for Crippled Tubercular Children, and the National Tuberculosis Association.

Celerity Necessary In Stain Removal

When you go after spots, start work quickly—before the stain dries, if you can. You can well copy professional cleaners who "spot out" stains before general cleaning. Pressing over spots will "set" some stains.

It's wise to test the effect of water or a chemical remover on a hidden hem or seam. Strong acids or strong alkalies destroy wool fabrics. Even if a mild acid is used, or a mild alkali (such as a weak solution of ammonia, borax, or washing soda) rinse it out well.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Is Young Wife Justified in Strongly Disapproving Officer Husband's Latterday Habit of Loafing Late In Cocktail Bars, With Men and Girls in Uniform?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your column bears evidence of knowledge, common sense and intuition. After reading the following, I want you to give me your impression of me as a wife; and if my social code is obsolete, I should like your suggestions for bringing it up-to-date. My husband is 35. I am 24. We have been married less than three years; and we have no children as yet, although we plan to have a family. We have lived in Washington about two years,—since my husband enlisted in the Army Medical Corps. We have an attractive apartment, enjoy entertaining, and do a great deal of it. I do not drink; but my husband drinks to be sociable.

I have always encouraged my husband to go out on stag parties occasionally. And it seems to be the custom among Army officers to give a stag dinner for friends who have been assigned to a change of duty. That is as it should be, I think. Recently, however, my husband has been attending a series of stag dinners that apparently have no motive. My husband (as well as the other men) get home any time after 2 a. m.; and he tells me the time is spent in some cocktail lounge after dinner,—making an evening run about eight hours. During this time, the men buy "rounds" of drinks first for a group of Woman Marines, then for a group of Waves, etc. As I have said, I want and cordially urge my husband to attend stag parties given for friends of his; but I bitterly censure the type of "partying" described.

Is my attitude unreasonable? Should I accept this behavior as morale-building war-time recreation? It is my conviction that no good can come of it for anybody concerned; although I must add that my husband has never given me any cause to be jealous. We are extremely happy; but if he should continue to seek this type of recreation I am afraid I shall lose proper respect for him,—a thing over which I would have no control. Now, am I being childish, and perhaps showing jealousy, in feeling this way? Or should I influence my husband into seeing the situation as I do?—as I am sure I can do, if that is the best policy. B. K. R.

Irregular Behavior For a Married Man

DEAR B. K. R.: In my opinion, your husband's encroaching predilection for ganging up with a stag party to loaf his nights away in cocktail lounges, buying drinks for bevies of uniformed women, comes under the heading of highly irregular behavior on the part of a married man,—who is also an officer, and hence supposedly a gentleman. Such conduct does not qualify as morale-building wartime recreation,—not for a man whose wife and home are located in the immediate vicinity. Which is to say, he hasn't even the tenuous excuse of being adrift from home and lonely for gentle companionship, to justify this unorthodox activity. What it amounts to is spendthrift carousing,—wasteful of time, money and energy; and subtly destructive of the moral integrity and emotional fidelity that make a man a good husband, properly entitled to his wife's love and respect.

THUS, from my viewpoint, your strong disapproval of this bachelor-type dalliance is expressive of straight thinking, a sound sense of social values, and valid, mature-minded concern for your husband's well-being; and indictative, also, of admirably forthright willingness to bravely go to bat to rescue him from, and educate him against, the wrong kind of influence and example that are leading him astray,—and threatening to play havoc with the marriage relationship. So put aside any notion that you are being childish or showing jealousy, in feeling as you do; and bring all the logic and eloquence you can muster to the vital task of persuading him to renounce this roistering routine. Because I am convinced, with you, that the marriage will land on the rocks if he doesn't. M. H.

The Pastime Drinker Has Too Much Leisure

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I do not usually read columns such as yours; nor do I write very often to those I should. However, after reading your article of October 28, I feel you overlooked one point which might prove helpful. The headline on your column told the story,—"After rearing four children in idyllic marriage, couple's happiness is marred by man's recent drinking, which he laughs about, as wife worries." After lean years of struggle, the man has reached the top in a national organization, and is enjoying an income that borders on wealth. He tells his wife he hasn't a worry in the world; and says he drinks to celebrate his good fortune. You pointed out that "fear or its equivalent is involved in such high-tension 'celebrating.'" You asked: "Fear of what? Is it fear that his hard-won prosperity won't last? Or fear that it is almost too late now, at his age, to get the kick out of life he had set as his reward, when he got in the money?" As for advice, you said you were reminded of one unusually candid psychiatrist's blunt estimate of the drink problem, to-wit: "Only God can help a drunkard; and then only if he is willing to be helped."

IN EFFECT, you gave the gentleman a verbal kick in the pants that ought to start him thinking. Plainly he needed a jacking-up; but he needs, even more, a new challenge to accomplishment. His four children are grown; and his three sons are now serving in the Army. He is drifting with the tide on his present income, spending freely on liquor and poker games. Now is the time to invest those extra greenbacks in something that will give him a run for his money. With three boys in the service, he ought to be buying bonds up-to-the-hilt to hasten victory;—or doesn't he care? His wife tells you he is "well educated and highly intelligent." How could any educated, intelligent man let down his three boys in the service; and the good wife who helped him rear them through hard years of poverty; and the young daughter who is still at home,—by behaving dissolutely in times like these?

Given Tough Job to Do, Real Man Shuns Bottle

AFTER COLLEGE, I entered the banking field; and learned that banking, like any other occupation, can get a man into a rut. I married two years ago, at almost 40, and then came the war,—to jog me out of my rut. I am in the Army now, having worked my way up to a major's commission; and after the war, I am turning to farming; and I don't even know how to milk a cow! We have the means to live an easy life if we want to (my wife and I); but we want to really live,—not just exist on a good income. Life has become too easy for this man, and what he needs is a tough job to do. That will take him off the bottle. Very sincerely yours. E. M. K.

Henry J. Kaiser Addresses Woman's Democratic Club

By Genevieve Reynolds

Deploring the lack of proper sanitary and feeding facilities as well as child care and shopping centers in his own war plants, soft-voiced Henry J. Kaiser, industrial genius, declared that if he had his way women workers would have beauty parlors, too.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Guest speaker at the Woman's National Democratic Club's luncheon meeting yesterday at the Willard Hotel, he said that as more and more women entered industry, the need for adequate housing, shopping centers and decent eating places increased. Furthermore, he pointed out that these facilities could be self-liquidating.

As proof that medical care, good housing, shopping centers, theaters pay high dividends, Kaiser cited the Coulee Dam, where all these things were given to the workers. Production increased because the workers were happy and comfortable.

Asked what proportion of employes would be with the Kaiser shipyards a year after the war, he answered only 5 per cent, unless something is done now.

Do Two Things at Once

"It is easy to do two things at once," he asserted, "fight the war and prepare for peace. Specifically, the thing to do is to keep on producing, producing more things now and in the postwar era."

Expressing great optimism about war production, Kaiser said, "We're coming along."

He predicted that next year a cargo ship capable of carrying 700 troops and returning 550 wounded would be flying.

"The war and postwar are indivisible," he asserted. "Then let's create efficiency now. It will be more difficult to obtain after the war than now."

Women in Industrry

Queried as to how many women will remain in industry after the war, he replied: "At least 50 per cent."

Incidentally, the speaker said the greatest opposition to overcome in obtaining hospitals in the critical war areas seems to be that of hospitals which fear the postwar effects.

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, who was to have spoken with Kaiser, was unable to attend the luncheon because of illness.

Mrs. Elizabeth May Craig, president of the club, presided and introduced the guests, among whom was Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President. Others seen were Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, director of the WACS, and Representative Mary T. Norton of New Jersey.

Tips to the Ambitious

Apartment dwellers who want to give window screens a thorough cleaning before storing them will find the bathtub useful. Spread a discarded sheet or other large cloth on the bottom of the tub, covering all but the drain. Take one screen at a time, pour a pail of sudsy water over the screen. Scrub until soot and dirt are removed. Then tilt the shower at an angle when it will rinse the screen. Let the screens dry thoroughly before sending them to the basement storeroom.

Now It Can Be Told—Escaped Patriot Here With Thrilling Tales of Norway's Underground

Secrecy Is First Lesson for Those Fighting the Nazis

By Jean Craighead

Norway is silent, obedient—Nazi high command brags.

Beneath the silence, subterranean murmurs are heard in Allied quarters every day. Energetic forceful life is transmitted to the United States and Great Britain from beneath the dead, oppressed silence.

Washington heard this story at a recent gathering, but for obvious reasons, the name of the narrator must be withheld.

For this is the underground, that has learned through 40,000 tragic mistakes how to operate illegally before the Gestapo, the first lesson of which is secrecy.

Although radios are confiscated, Norway listens to OWI broadcasts and London news. A young man pulls a leaf of a potted plant and the flower pot tunes in on London.

News of Allied victories are completely withheld from the Nazi controlled newspapers, but letters leaving Norway by strange hand-to-hand routes, tell of the people smiling in the streets when word of the Tunisian campaign reached the cities. They quote from Stalin's Leningrad speech, and through invisible communications, follow the war in detail.

Underground Remains Shrouded in Secrecy

Every day fishing vessels leave the coast with smuggled cargo—a young patriot was engaged in illegal work until he was hunted down. He called his home one evening, and a Nazi answered the phone. He said good-evening to his colleagues, and putting on his hat left the office and disappeared quietly.

No one knows who is with the underground. They trust no one. Not even their family. One morning a young girl found the name of her sister, who had been living with her, on the Nazi list of prisoners. She raised her eyebrows slightly, it was the first time she had known that they were both in the same outlawed office.

Nearly everyone in Norway has a fictitious name. No one can tell when a friend will be tortured and forced, though unwilling, to disclose important connections. If he says Schmitt when the name is Stevens, no harm is done. So complete is the system, that four young men, working in the same office were sailing to England before they knew each others names.

Illegal Newspaper Reaches Citizens

Fear, once so foreign to the highly democratic nation, has now left its cruel mark in the faces of children and adults. Everything is to be feared. One night a daughter of an important official was working a radio set in the attic of a deserted house, when she heard footsteps on the stairs. She could hear her knees knocking in a dull monotone under her as the footsteps came up and up. There was a heavy knock at the door, and for that moment she said, she was actually dead. Then, the person turned and went slowly, precisely down the stairs. Many minutes later, she opened the door and found the Salvation Army newspaper lying on the floor.

Despite the rigid control, an illegal newspaper is printed in Norway, and for a long time was sent to patriots through the mail.

Those who are doing this work have found there is no arguing with the Gestapo. Called before the Nazi officers one morning to explain his actions, a young man was faced with a detailed account of his activities before the occupation, and a pistol on the desk.

Most Humble Men Become "Pimpernels"

The valiant stories of the common man of Norway operating against tyranny are unreal. Ordinary people who filled negative positions in peace become clever "Pimpernels" before the trying demands of war. There is the story of the woman whom the neighborhood tolerated but chided for her ignorance. Two years later she was carrying a suitcase of illegal material to the train, when the Gestapo walked up. Completely unruffled, she asked the nearest one to help her carry her bag. He took it into her compartment for her, doffed his hat, and walked away.

These are the people of a once free democratic nation that can not be whipped. Nothing can stop their subterranean war, their sabotage, their zest for overthrowing the oppressor.

And no one knows it so well as the Nazis.

Olsen, Johnson, Air Forces Band To Feature Poster Bond Benefit

With Olsen and Johnson on hand to auction off posters, and the Army Air Forces famous band orchestra providing music in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel, the poster bond drive of the American Newspaperwomen's Club bids fair to get off to a rousing start.

The formal opening of the exhibit on Friday evening at 9 o'clock will be a colorful occasion, with Cabinet, governmental and Army and Navy officials among the honor guests for the occasion. Deputy Surgeon General Maj. Gen. George F. Lull will give a brief outline of the work of the surgical trucks at the battle front lines.

The whole purpose of the exhibit of First World War posters, over a thousands of them, is to raise funds through the sale of war bonds to send more of these surgical trucks to the front lines.

Frederick Merrill of the State Department, who collected the posters, has loaned them for the exhibit and has given a number of duplicate posters, some of them Howard Chandler Christie designs, to be auctioned off to the highest bidder. So that the highest bidder for these posters invests in more war bonds, receives a valuable poster, and also helps so save more wounded by getting surgical trucks to the front lines for them.

Due to popular demand, because of the celebrities to be present, the American Newspaperwomen's Club has decreed that this formal opening will be open to the public as well as to the members of the club and their guests. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Hobart Brooks at ME. 5199.

Famous New Year's Debutante Ball Follows Footsteps Of First Monday German; Becomes Another Casualty of War

ANOTHER WARTIME casualty is that ancient and honorable institution—the gala New Year's ball of the Baltimore Bachelors' Cotillion.

A year ago, the traditional First Monday German at which belles have made their bows since 1796 was canceled for the second time in its history, the first being back in 1918. But with last year's announcement that the German was called off came word that debutantes would curtsey at the New Year's Eve Cotillion instead. Now, that too, is out the window for the duration. The Cotillion's Board of Governors has decreed that both events will be off the calendar until further notice.

For decades the First Bachelors' Cotillion was the biggest social event of the year. Drawing grade-A debutantes in droves from Washington, Philadelphia and New York, the fete colorfully carried on a tradition begun more than 200 years ago when a group of young men joined to entertain the sweet young things of their day at a formal ball.

For many years the annual party was held in the Old Lyric Opera House where the glamour of by-gone days was recreated from start to finish. Preceded by a gala round of parties, the cotillion began promptly at 11:30 o'clock. As the debutantes and their escorts entered the theater, they dropped the mannerisms of today—stepped before the shades of the past in a becomingly subdued manner, treading lightly and cautiously.

Antedated only by the historic St Cecelia ball in Charleston, S. C., the Bachelors' Cotillion was ruled by tradition. A grand march and waltz always opened the program for the evening. For years, the same handsome old brocades hung from the lofty windows; old-gold candelabra shed a becoming light over the dancers and flowers festooned the boxes that ringed the hall—flowers sent to the debutantes of the day. Music was subdued. Dancing was slow and graceful, with pretty girls in clouds of white tulle floating about as if in a waltzing ballet.

Smoking? Only in a restricted part of the theater—never on the ball floor. Drinking? Definitely no, for both the debutantes and their escorts. In other words, the ball was not just another ball; it was the high-point in a girl's social career; it was the result of an awesome social heritage.

The Cotillion's Board of Governors have made it plain that only the difficulties of war influenced their decision to cancel the New Year's ball. They have hinted that the suspension is only for the duration. Perhaps. Time alone will tell.

ODDMENTS OF interest department: Wonder where Herbert Lehmann gets those high-topped shoes he wears? . . . Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, pretty and personable WAC director, is one of the few Capitalites never seen in a Washington bar . . . Members of the Women's National Press Club are puzzled as to what Henry Kaiser really meant yesterday when, during his speech at their luncheon, he said he hoped some day to have beauty parlors provided for all his women workers, and added, "One look at all of you gives evidence that beauty parlors are absolutely necessary!" . . . Incidentally, best quip the shipbuilding wizard got off, in the course of his speech had to do with important wartime projects. Said he, "You know, they're usually public knowledge at first—then confidential; and finally, secret!"

WHEN THE BIG new freighter John L. Stoddard slips down the ways at Richmond Ship Yard, San Francisco Bay, next Monday a Washington girl will have wielded that traditional bottle of champagne. She is Mary Alice Stoddard, 15-year-old daughter of Lothrop Stoddard, and granddaughter of the man for whom the ship is named.

A generation ago, you'll remember, a set of "Stoddards' Lectures" was in every library. From 1875 until he retired in 1897, Dr. Stoddard was recognized as the greatest travel talker and writer of his day.

Accompanying Mary Alice to the West Coast will be Miss Zoya Dickins, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Randolph Dickins, who will serve as maid of honor at the ceremony. The two will be off by train from Washington this afternoon at 5:30. They will return the latter part of next week.

ENVY OF ALL the other pupils in those twice-a-week Spanish classes in Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin's Shoreham apartment is Mrs. Jesse Jones. She does her home-work well; is quite definitely the star of the sessions, and can now carry on Spanish conversation like a native.

The classes, incidentally, began last winter . . . and at this point are gathering in such a drove of students that the teacher, Prof. Ramon Ramos, is toying with the idea of starting still another series. On Mondays and Thursdays—at 2, 3 and 4 p. m., some of Washington's most prominent hostesses gather to recite their lessons. A strict schoolmaster, Professor Ramos brooks no foolishness. Classes begin on the dot. All questions are in Spanish. An atmosphere of solemnity pervades the gathering, and a pin-drop quiet is evident between questions. Mrs. Francis Biddle is a star pupil in one class. She and her husband began studying at home last winter, and their enthusiasm for the language was whipped up considerably on their recent trip to Mexico.

Among others who have enrolled with firm intention of mastering Spanish are Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Ralph Bard, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Joseph Casey, Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower, Mrs. Bruce Smith and Mrs. Frank Morrow.

Lieut. Sands Married in California

Of interest to Washington is the marriage in Los Angeles on Sunday of Miss Virginia de Figueras, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Juan de Figueras of Los Angeles, and Lieut. Frederick Sands, USNR, son of Mrs. Emory Fullam Sands of Washington and New York. The ceremony comes as a climax of a romance which began three years ago in New York. The bride attended schools in London, Paris and Munich, and until the outbreak of war in Europe lived in Biarritz, France.

Lieutenant Sands is stationed in San Francisco and before entering the Navy was with the Grace Line. He is the grandson of Mrs. Frederick Sands of Newport, R. I., and of the late Rear Admiral William F. Fullam, USN, and the late Mrs. Fullam of Washington. Admiral Fullam, a former Pacific Department commander and superintendent of the United States Naval Academy, wrote newspaper articles after his retirement under the pen name, Quarterdeck. A destroyer, the William Freeland Fullam, named for him, was launched in April, 1942, at Boston.

To Be Married

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob C. Sherbahn announce the engagement of their daughter, Maxine Louise, to John Franklin Norris, U. S. Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Norris, New Castle, Pa.

The wedding wil take place on December 4.

Miss Yando Is Bride of Navy Officer

In the All Saints Episcopal Church in Chevy Chase yesterday, Miss Marjorie Elaine Yando became the bride of Lieut. Robert Bernard Murray, DC, USNR.

The bride is the daughter of Capt. Arthur H. Yando, USN, and Mrs. Yando of Bethesda, and Lieutenant Murray is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Bernard C. Murray of Portersville, Md.

Officiating at the 6 o'clock service was the Rev. C. W. Lowry. Captain Yando gave his daughter in marriage. She was attired in a gown of white satin, designed with fitted bodice and court train. Her full-length veil of illusion was held with a Mary Queen of Scots cap of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of roses and orchids.

Mrs. Raymond Burke, the matron of honor, wore a gown of bridal pink brocade taffeta and carried a bouquet of pink and white roses that matched her headdress. Miss Biana Behrens, the maid of honor, was costumed in pale blue brocade taffeta and carried pink roses. Comdr. John Paul served as best man and ushering were Lieut. Comdr. Edmund Jeansonne, Lieut. Comdr. James Bradley and Lieut. Comdr. Joseph Restarski.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. The couple left later for a wedding trip to New York and upon their return will make their home in Chevy Chase. The bride attended the University of California, where she was a member of Alpha Omicron Pi. Lieutenant Murray also attended the University of California and the Dental School there. He is a member of Sigma Chi and Xi Psi Phi fraternities.

Lieut. Litman and Bride Leave

Lieut. (j. g.) Murray Robert Litman, USCG Reserve, and Mrs. Litman, the former Miss Ruth Ansell, left last night for Miami, where the bridegroom will be stationed. They were married Sunday at the bride's home, with Rabbi Harry Silverstone officiating.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Ansell, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a light blue silver lame street-length dress and carried a small prayer book with white orchids. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Toba Fine, matron of honor. Mr. Joseph L. Fine was best man for the bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Litman. A small reception followed the ceremony.

Purely Personal

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

A Mighty Object Lesson In What All-Out War Is

IT IS NOT TOO MUCH to say that "The Battle of Russia," opening tomorrow on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater, is the most vivid and appallingly realistic film record that has come out of the war . . . Not even excepting "Desert Victory," which is made to seem Lilliputian in comparison . . . Combining documentary material with stark scenes of bloody battle and repeated evidences of Nazi barbarism, this factual subject compiles a magnificent and moving revelation of the individual and national fortitude and valor of the Russian people, from the Kremlin to the most humble farmer's cottage . . . Made originally as an orientation film exclusively for Army consumption, it is not to be wondered at that the War Department now wishes "The Battle of Russia" to be seen by every last man jack in the United States . . . Yesterday morning's preview clinched the War Department's case . . . There is enough indictment in this one film to hang the whole Nazi high command and most of their underlings—except that that would be too good for them . . . Something of the same quality should disclose itself when Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of Lillian Hellman's "The North Star" comes along to the screen at RKO-Keith's in a week . . . A reading of the script—the picture has not been previewed here—reveals it as another fine tribute to Russian courage, aloof from politics, partisanship and ideologies, otherwise than by implication . . . The local trend, at the moment, seems to be moving hesitantly away from escapism and back toward the war.

LILLIAN HELLMAN

But there still will be ample fare for the escapist during Armistice Week . . . "Princess O'Rourke," moving its opening day up to tomorrow at the Earle, is a romantic comedy of the first grade, with Olivia de Havilland, Robert Cummings and Charles Coburn in practically their highest fettle . . . Betty Grable and Robert Young will continue to untangle the love-life of "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" through a second week at Loew's Palace—all dolled up in tunes and Technicolor . . . "Phantom of the Opera"—murder and music, with Nelson Eddy, Susanna Foster and Claude Rains—holding over at Keith's and nothing ominous appears on any other horizon . . . As a matter of fact, come next Wednesday, the Little Theater will be breaking out "Jeannie," the prize, British-made, comedy whimsy of the year—according to all report—with Barbara Mullen and Michael Redgrave costarred . . . Robert Donat in "Tartu," witn Lee Sims and Ilomay Bailey headlining the stage bill, will light up the Capitol's marquee tomorrow . . . Speaking of tomorrow, the Warner management announces that for those wishing to divert themselves on Armistice Day, matinee performances will be given in all their neighborhood houses customarily alight only in the evening . . . These will begin at 1 p. m., at the Apollo, Avalon, Avenue Grand, Colony, Home, Savoy, Seco, Tacoma and York theaters . . . Earle and Metropolitan will open, as usual, at 10:30 a. m.

A New Name to Fit the Times

The Loew people have thought up a new name for it—"Know Your Allies Day." instead of "Armistice" . . . So in addition to premiering "The Battle of Russia" at the Columbia, they will have as their honor guests at the Capitol tomorrow night, to see Donat in "The Adventures of Tartu," Vladimir Hurban, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of Czechoslovakia, Mme. Hurban and party . . . Czechoslovakia provides the scene of much of the action . . . Four winsome Czechoslovakian young women will "man" the Capitol's war bond booth on this occasion . . . And as long as we're on the Capitol, Lynn Allison, the theater's gifted contract vocalist, will be queen of the Armistice Day Ball, given by the Department of the District of Columbia, Veterans of Foreign Wars, at the Willard tomorrow night . . . The queenly crown will be placed on the alabaster Allison brow by Department Commander Jack Holliday—which is luck enough in one day for any one man!

"Thank Your Lucky Stars," the Warner Brothers' star-studded musical has been chosen by the National Screen Council to receive the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award as the best picture for the enjoyment of the whole family released in October—the picture, not the family . . . That's the one we voted for . . . The October balloting list, incidentally, was a shade baffling to a Washington screengazer—There weren't more than half a dozen pictures in the entire catalogue of which the Capitol had ever heard, let alone seen . . . It happens like that once in a while, proving our repeated contention that Washington sees only the cream of the crop—and sometimes only the pick of them . . . Which is a virtually perfect arrangement, until it comes to a vote! . . . Somewhere on a front line are two "Uncle Harry" jeeps, bought last year and presented to the Government by members of the "Uncle Harry" company, headed by Eva Le Gallienne, and Joseph Schildkraut, which comes to the National Theater for two weeks, beginning next Monday . . . Second subscription play of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society's current season of six . . . Remember?

HEDDA HOPPER

Viva La Prima Donna!

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 9.—I hope it's true that Grace Moore's coming back to Metro for another picture. We sure killed off our prima donnas in one fell swoop. Gladys Swarthout was pelted with ripe tomatoes by her husband, thinking he could be more gentle than the audience. Scene was so unpleasant it never got on the screen. Same year Lily Pons played a bird in a gilded cage. No wonder their pictures failed. Like the old silent days, when they wanted to get rid of stage stars, among them Sir Herbert Tree, they gave him a Yankee farmer to play. He stayed, and did it, and collected. Now we have more sense. We buy the story first and fit the stars into it.

GRACE MOORE

Runs On and On

Ken Murray's "Blackouts" are outlasing ours. He's had five picture offers, another to do his show on the screen. But Ken wants to tour in it, and you can't do that and show it on the screen at the same time. . . . Mary Astor got Louis B. Mayer's permission to play opposite Noel Coward in "Blithe Spirit," in London. Now she can't get transportation over. . . . Harold Lloyd stopped traffic at Hollywood and Vine when he escorted his two daughters to lunch.

Not Long Enough

Producer David Hempstead has a month's holiday in New York before beginning five more pictures. He's trying to get Joan Fontaine for "Prodigal Woman." Cary Grant is all set for "None But the Lonely Heart." In "The Light Fantastic," Bing Crosby plays a dual role—himself and an ancestor. Besides, he has "Elizabeth Kenny," "The Gibson Girl," and Leo McCarey's next . . . Rosalind Russell liked Travis Banton's clothes so much in "Ten Percent Woman," she wanted to buy them. Company usually sells for half price, but this year full amount was asked. Then came a scene in which she had to wear a fur coat. She wore her own, and charged them rents which offset the 50 per cent she expected off her wardrobe. You've got to get up early to lick that one . . . Bing Crosby's vacation much too short. He reports back to Paramount the twenty-second to begin "Road to Utopia" with Bob Hope and Dottie Lamour—and it's through Bing that Al Walker, assistant, gets to direct this one.

Right Beginning

Dick Haymes went to Masquers Club to sing for wounded soldiers and offered his services every Saturday night. He also has one night a week at the canteen. Saturday night Alan Reed hosts the Masquers party with his former boss, Fred Allen, as guest of honor, and, if they can work out a routine, his beloved enemy, Jack Benny. . . . D. W. Griffith isn't hanging around waiting until we buy his story. He's having himself a time at Arthur Murray's, learning to jitterbug.

Ginger Rogers Joins the League

Hollywood.—As the wife of Pfc. Jack Briggs, USMC, Ginger Rogers has become a member of the Marine Corps League Auxiliary, an organization of wives, sisters and mothers of Marines, who maintain a recreation center for them, visit hospitals and aid in entertainment during leaves. Ginger was inducted by Mrs. Thelma Davis, president of the Los Angeles chapter, who visited her on the set of Paramount's "Lady in the Dark."

During the last war, Mrs. Lela Rogers, mother of Ginger, and then Lela Leibrand, was a member of the Marinettes, who are assigned to noncombatant duty with the Marines. So association with the Marines is "in the family," so far as the Rogerses are concerned.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SHORTLY BEFORE the Vice President of the United States visited Dallas last month, his secretary, bulky, two-fisted Texan Harold Young, wrote to the swank Salesmanship Club in Dallas suggesting they invite the Vice President to lunch with them and deliver a talk on October 21.

Young, who lives in Dallas, knew Salesmanship Club members as Jesse Jones sympathizers, but figured his chief, "the VP," should beard the lion in his den. Also he figured the invitation would cause Salesmanship Clubsters to throw a fit.

Apparently it did. Soon Young received a letter from Club President Dick Brown which politely declined to listen to the Vice President of the United States on October 21.

"Considerable opposition exists on some of the speaker's (Wallace's) recently expressed views," wrote Brown. "And though he might not express those views, the Salesmanship Club would be identified with having sponsored his trip to Dallas.

"We would be most pleased," concluded Brown to his fellow Texan, "to have you address the club on some Thursday when your business or pleasure throws you to Dallas."

In reply, Vice Presidential Secretary Young wrote: "I am accepting your invitation tendered by the board of directors of the Salesmanship Club and shall be in Dallas on both business and pleasure October 21, 1943. Will it be convenient for me to bring a guest?"

Again the high-hat members of the Salesmanship Club writhed with worry. Flustered President Brown wrote back:

"Your appearance on October 21, in view of the discussion already raised and the divergence of opinion on Mr. Wallace's views, would surely create embarrassment and might endanger the unity that has always been so characteristic of the club . . . So let's have a cooling off period and hold the meting at some time when it would not be identified with Mr. Wallace."

Finally Jokester Young relieved worried Clubster Brown by telling him he was only "having fun" with the "solemn directors." Intimating that Brown should go out to Caddo Lake and get back his sense of humor, Young added: "You forgot that I am a pixie at heart."

Note: When Wallace went to Dallas, "Pixie" Young saw to it that his boss spoke to four large gatherings—workmen and ordinary folks—also shook hands with 1700 people, which beat the hand-shaking records of Calvin Coolidge.

New League of Nations?

DIPLOMATS ARE watching the Atlantic City food and rehabilitation conference opening today more carefully than any other international event in this country. They figure that the pattern it adopts will set the stage for whatever type of world peace organization the USA may join after the war.

Also they are worried. For the preliminary moves look to small-nation diplomats as if the worst features of the League of Nations were being sown all over again.

Yesterday, one day before the 44 United Nations and Associated Nations meet at Atlantic City, an agreement was signed in Washington regarding the organization to be created at Atlantic City.

This structure provides for a sort of assembly for 44 nations, similar to the League's assembly. Also it provides for a central committee of four nations, similar to the League Council. This central committee will run things. The smaller nations will meet once or twice a year to approve.

This has advantages and disadvantages. The central committee will be streamlined and able to act quickly. Also it will have great political power, because food and clothing mean life or death. But among the big four the USA can easily be outvoted. The little countries, who have been our stanchest allies, especially Lation Americans, will not be represented.

Fewer Tires for Allies

ONE THING NOT discussed at the Moscow Conference was rubber tires. If the question had been raised, Russia would have been told that tires on lend-lease will have to be reduced sharply.

Reason is that United States trucks and buses are wearing their tires down to the fabric, and Jesse Jones's long ballyhooed synthetic tires are falling behind schedule. There is plenty of new rubber, but a dire lag in tire production.

Meanwhile, bus and truck transportation has never been more vital. Last year intercity buses carried more passengers than the railroads (680 million compared with 669 million), though for fewer miles.

If they are crippled, the weight would be thrown back on the already struggling railroads. Also, many places would be without transportation, since 54,000 communities have no rail service.

The Army, OPA, ODT and the rubber director's office are putting their heads together to find a way out. One solution will be a reduction of tires shipped on lend-lease. Russia alone was promised 500,000 this year, in addition to two million already delivered.

Note: This commitment, plus the deal for shipping a whole tire factory to Russia, always griped Big Bill Jeffers when he was rubber director. He explained the case to visitors by going through a pantomime of picking up the telephone and receiving instructions to ship a half million tires to Russia. Then he would say, "And on the other end of the line is the White House! What the hell can I do?"

Tax Fight

HERE IS HOW strained tax relations are between the Treasury, which wants a heavy tax bill, and the Ways and Means Committee, which shies away from heavy taxes: Congressmen will not let able Treasury Counsel Randolph Paul sit in the committee rooms when its own tax adviser, Colin Stam, is testifying.

This means that no one can ask disagreeable questions of Stam and puncture any ideas on how large revenue can be raised from low tax theories.

Action to Lift Margarine Tax Pigeonholed

On a vote of 14 to 11, the House Agriculture Committee yesterday called off legislation started by its chairman, Representative Fulmer (Democrat) of South Carolina to lift Federal taxes and restrictions on the sale of margarine.

Representative Andresen (Republican) of Minnesota made the motion to postpone further consideration of the measure during the Seventy-eighth Congress. Chairman Fulmer is in Florida for a rest prescribed by physicians.

Current Federal taxes on margarine are 10 cents a pound on the colored product, one-fourth cent a pound on all sales, plus special retail license fees. Most of the imposts have been on the books more than a half century, and attempts to change them have resulted in numerous hot controversies.

The National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, which was geared to fight the bill with all its weight, declared through its secretary, Charles W. Holman, the action to table "represents an action that is gratifying to the informed public as well as dairy farmers."

Holman declared a truce "under which this issue was not to be raised during the time of war is now restored in the interest of general harmony," and said the dairy interests would file with the committee all material they intended to bring out during later days of the hearing.

Margarine proponents, he said, failed to show that lifting of the restrictions would "add one pound to the total food supply of the Nation" and made it clear their main purpose was 'the capture of postwar consumer markets."

Real Jap War Story Not Told, Optimists Hear

Dr. John S. Lechner, representing the Americanism Educational League and the American Legion, yesterday told members of the Optimist Club that if the Army and Navy were to divulge the known atrocities heaped on American fighting men in the Southwest Pacific, the Nation as a whole would demand a change in the present strategy of concentrating our major military strength in the European theater of operations.

A Californian, Dr. Lechner said that because the Administration did not want public attention to be distracted from Europe that the real story of our war with Japan is not being told.

Opposes "Coddling" Japs

He blasted the War Relocation Authority as being entirely inadequate to deal with the problem of Japanese in this country. He said he had warned Government leaders at least a week in advance that trouble was brewing in the Klamath Falls relocation center.

Our treatment of Japanese in the United States was termed "coddling," and he condemned the attitude of the Society of Friends (Quakers) who, he said, were taking young Japanese out of internment camps and sending them to schools and universities to complete their education.

Commenting on the danger of the Japanese as an enemy the speaker said the American public had never fully understood the real threat raised by them. He said the Japanese had perfected psychological warfare to its ultimate and warned of the staying power of the Japanese people.

The Oriental Mind

"For decades the Westerner has made the mistake of trying to inject the Occidental mind into the Oriental mind," Dr. Lechner said. "You must remember that our civilization is based upon the moral precepts of Christianity while that of the Japanese is based solely on allegiance to the Emperor and the empire."

Dr. Lechner recalled the strides made by the Japanese in their "Asia for the Asiatics" policy. He said that despite the benevolent attitude of the U. S. in the prewar Philippines, the production of iron in the islands had doubled under Japanese occupation.
